- Was a commitment made by Parties to reduce greenhouse gas emissions

- It provided recognition that developed countries are responsible for climate change and must reduce their own emissions (although the definition of a ‘developed country’ was not necessarily clear)

- It was amended in 2020 via the ‘Doha Amendment’, which set legally binding targets for 27 countries