

A Shred of Doubt: Brexit's Future

As the United Kingdom and the European Union approach their divorce date on March 29, disputes over the terms of that separation are causing many to rethink Brexit. Will Parliament and the British people find a responsible way forward, or will this relationship be left in tatters? Here is the state of play as the latest moves are made.

Brexit Deal

The British People

Leave or Remain 2016

51.9% voted to leave;
48.1% voted to remain.¹

2019

If a referendum on the UK's membership of the EU were held now, 35% would vote to leave, whereas 53% would vote to remain.²

28%

Theresa May's current approval rating.⁵

Parliament

Economic Implications*

A 33% drop in the number of people who believed Brexit would make the British economy stronger.⁴

GDP could decrease by 0.6 – 3% in a no deal scenario, meaning the UK's GDP could shrink by up to €313 billion in the long run.³

Brexit Deal Vote*

January 15, 2019

432 - 202

FOR

196 Conservative
3 Labour
3 Independent

AGAINST

118 Conservative
248 Labour
35 SNP
11 Liberal Democrat
10 DUP
4 Plaid
1 Green
5 Independent

Sources

1. Source: BBC. / 2. Source: European Parliament. / 3. Source: Bertelsmann Stiftung. / 4. Source: YouGov. / 5. Source: YouGov.