A SIGHT NOT TO BE MISSED!

The northern lights are caused by the interaction of particles from the sun with the upper atmosphere near the North Pole. That creates this wonderful light effect, known as the aurora borealis (northern lights).

These stunning lights are a spectacular natural phenomenon, often seen dancing across the Icelandic Arctic sky from late August to mid-April.

Seeing the northern lights dancing in the sky is on many travelers bucket list and we recommend to book a northern lights tour on the first night in Iceland as it might be the travelers one and only chance to see the lights!

If the lights don't show up, travelers are offered to re-book our RE62 tour for free one of the following evenings.
