Lactalis Group 2025 Palm Oil Mill List

Promoting transparency along our value chain

Corporate
July 2026

Palm oil is an efficient and widely used crop, valued for its functional properties in the food and beverages industry. However, when production practices are inadequate, they can generate significant negative impacts. These impacts include biodiversity loss and deforestation, climate change, as well as the exposure of workers and communities to human rights risks.

Although Lactalis sources less than 0.02% of global palm oil consumption, the group has decided to establish a dedicated policy for this commodity. This policy sets ambitious responsible-sourcing requirements, tackling both environmental and social challenges. Lactalis published its Palm Oil Policy in 2022.

Lactalis Palm Oil Policy applies to all ingredients containing palm oil and derivatives purchased by Lactalis worldwide and is organized around three pillars:

- Mitigating deforestation and land conversion risks;
- Protecting the rights of workers and local communities;
- Going beyond the supply chain, supporting smallholders and restoring forests.

Achieving these objectives depends on knowing where palm oil comes from and how it is produced. Traceability and transparency are key enablers of responsible sourcing, allowing Lactalis to assess risks and support continuous improvement across the supply chain.

In June 2026, Lactalis publishes its first palm oil mill list, strengthening transparency regarding the upstream origins of the palm oil used in its products. The group's traceability work achieved 94.1% traceability to mill for all palm oil volumes we purchased.

The mills listed reflect 2025 volumes reported by Lactalis' direct suppliers and may evolve as supply chain data is updated. The presence of a mill does not imply a direct commercial relationship with Lactalis.

Disclaimer: This list represents Lactalis' best knowledge of its 2025 supply chain, based on data collected with suppliers. While the group has taken care to validate the information, it cannot guarantee full accuracy. Lactalis welcomes any reliable corrections that help improve data quality.
