MEASURING ROOF PITCH

Our cupolas are designed for a roof pitch of up to 9" rise per foot (known as 9/12 pitch). Most roofs are not steeper than this. To measure your roof pitch, use a carpenter's framing square as shown in our illustration. Check square with a level and record the "rise."

If your roof is steeper than a 9/12 pitch, you will need an extended base. This must be ordered with your initial cupola purchase.

CHOOSING THE CORRECT CUPOLA SIZE

Consider about 1" inch of cupola width for every foot of unbroken roof line. If a roof section measures 24 feet, the minimum cupola size should be 24 inches square. If a larger than 60 inch square cupola is needed, perhaps use two cupolas on the roof line – with one inch of cupola for every foot of unbroken roof line.

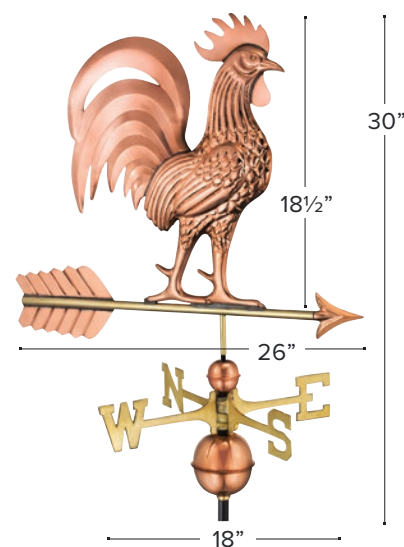

Walpole cupolas are ideal for ventilating a barn or garage and will keep most rain water out. However, because some rain water may enter during driving storms, we do not recommend cutting the roof for ventilation over a finished room.
