Proxy Voting Guidelines

©MERS

Overall Principles

These proxy voting guidelines contain general statements about how we are likely to vote on an issue. These are not completely rigid positions, and we may consider circumstances that might call for a different vote than a specific guideline suggests. This may include taking into account different regulatory or corporate governance regimes and customary practices in different jurisdictions, as well as the different stages of a company's growth.

Nothing in these guidelines should be considered to be a constraint on the ability of OMERS to direct a vote on an issue other than as set out in these guidelines, where doing so is intended to meet OMERS fiduciary obligations.

Moreover, while OMERS is generally seeking to support votes that emphasize long-term shareholder value, there may be circumstances where OMERS seeks to enhance short-term shareholder value in support of a trade or strategy.

Proxy Voting Process

OMERS aims to vote every share of each company we own at every general meeting held by that company. However, we recognize that in limited markets, additional administrative burdens continue to exist that may preclude us from voting. We review all voting items and make all of our proxy voting decisions independently and in the context of these Proxy Voting Guidelines. In applying our guidelines, we consult a variety of materials, including company filings, such as the proxy statement or information circular, as well as proxy research reports from external proxy voting service providers. We may contact companies ahead of the shareholder meeting to discuss any issues or concerns regarding the resolutions being submitted to a shareholder vote.

Vote Items Include:

- Elect Directors;
- Adopt/Amend Nomination Procedure

Board of Directors

The Board of Directors of a company is responsible for providing stewardship and oversight of management and operations of the company and has a duty to act in the best interests of the corporation. Fulfilling this duty will ensure that the company is managed in the best interests of shareholders.

Its key responsibilities include:

- establishing and maintaining a company's purpose, values, strategy, and culture;
- keeping the right management team in place;
- overseeing the assessment and management of both current and emerging risks;
- ensuring effective engagement with shareholders and other stakeholders;
- monitoring how management is operating the business; and
- oversight of material sustainability risks and opportunities.

To fulfill its responsibilities, boards must be in a position to challenge management's plans and recommendations in a constructive manner while evaluating execution and results objectively. Our guidelines relating to boards of directors have been designed to encourage effective and independent boards. We may withhold votes from the chair of the relevant board committee if, in our view, the board has failed to oversee the management of material sustainability risks.

Board Size

Guideline:

We support a board size that leads to effective board decision-making and governance. The board should be large enough to provide diversity of thought and expertise, and allow key committees to be staffed with independent directors, but small enough to encourage active participation of all members.

We will not ordinarily vote against director candidates simply because the size of the board is questionable. We may do so, however, if the size of the board is inhibiting its effectiveness.

Discussion:

The board should be of sufficient size that the balance of skills and experience is appropriate for the requirements of the business.

Board size directly impacts the board's effectiveness. Board effectiveness in turn may impact shareholder value. Board size should not be too large to be cumbersome, but large enough to allow it to discharge its responsibilities. The board's top priority should be to ensure that it has enough competent and independent members with the appropriate skillset and diversity of experience, regardless of size.

Election of Directors

Guideline:

We support the election of directors individually rather than as a slate. We also support the establishment of a majority-vote standard for the election of directors. We will not support proposals that create a staggered board where directors' terms expire at different times.

Discussion:

We believe that shareholders should have the opportunity to assess and vote on the qualification and performance of each individual director, rather than being presented with a vote on a "slate" of directors. Slate voting is an unacceptable practice from a corporate governance perspective as it deprives shareholders of the right to withhold votes from (or vote against in some jurisdictions) nominees on an individual basis. As a result, slate voting can serve to insulate directors with unsatisfactory records from being held accountable to shareholders.

We also prefer that companies adopt a majority-vote standard for the election of directors, meaning that directors are elected by a majority of votes cast by shareholders. Where plurality voting is used, we encourage boards to adopt director resignation policies asking that directors tender their resignations if the number of votes withheld from or cast against the nominee exceeds the votes for the nominee.

However, we exercise discretion in applying this standard where there are more director nominees than board seats. In these cases, the plurality vote standard is more appropriate in order to avoid a situation where no candidates win a majority of the votes cast.

We prefer the annual election of all directors and will not normally support proposals that create a staggered board. When a staggered board has already been created, we will determine our position based on the specific circumstances.

If a board is subject to a contested election, we will evaluate the dissident's critique and proposed plan of action, and assess the qualifications, independence, experience, and track record of the alternate slate of nominees relative to that of the incumbent board. We will support the dissident slate when we believe that it is responsive to shareholder concerns and would be better positioned to increase shareholder value over the long term than the incumbent slate.

Cumulative Voting

Guideline:

We will review proposals for cumulative voting on a case-by-case basis, but will generally allocate votes in a manner that we believe is in the best long-term interests of shareholders.

Discussion:

Generally, shareholders are entitled to one vote per share in respect of each board position. Cumulative voting provides shareholders with a number of votes equal to the number of shares they own multiplied by the number of directors to be elected. These votes may then be apportioned among one, some or all director candidates.

Cumulative voting can provide representation to shareholders who have minority ownership, ensuring an independent voice at the boardroom table, but it can also allow a minority of shareholders to unduly influence the company.

Board Committees

Guideline:

We support independent board committees. We may vote against or withhold votes from individual nominees or an entire slate of nominees if non-independent directors serve on the Audit, Compensation, or Nominating/Corporate Governance Committees, taking into consideration corporate performance and governance practices over a suitable timeframe.

Discussion:

We believe that the board should delegate certain functions to committees while maintaining overall responsibility for the work of the committees. Each board should have three key committees composed wholly of independent directors: (1) the Audit Committee; (2) the Compensation Committee; and (3) the Nominating/Corporate Governance Committee.

We support the following principles regarding board committees:

Committee Independence:

Appointments to committees should not be made by the CEO.

Committee Charter: Each committee should have a written charter that specifies its roles and responsibilities and the charter should be publicly disclosed.

Member Qualification: We expect members of each committee to have suitable credentials for the committee work they will be asked to do. For example, we expect all members of the Audit Committee to be financially literate.

Succession Policy: The board should proactively lead and be accountable for the development, implementation, and continual review of succession plans for the CEO and directors.

The board should collaborate with the current CEO and senior management to identify candidates who possess the necessary leadership capabilities and ensure that appropriate career development opportunities are in place for any candidates within the company. Succession at board and CEO levels should be managed by a committee such as the Nominating/Corporate Governance Committee.

Access to Independent

Advisors: Committees should have the right to retain the services of independent advisors and are encouraged to disclose the identity of these advisors and the nature and dollar value of the services performed.

Separation of Board and Management

Guideline:

We support the separation of the roles of Chair of the board and CEO. If one person is Chair and CEO, it is difficult for the board to hold management accountable.

Discussion:

A key duty of a board is to provide management oversight on behalf of shareholders. As part of this duty, the board is responsible for recruiting, rewarding and, if necessary, terminating the employment of the CEO. These responsibilities put a combined Chair/CEO in a difficult position when heading the body that is responsible for overseeing management. Thus, we generally support a non-management, independent director serving as the board Chair.

In cases where the role of the Chair is combined with the role of the CEO, an independent director should be appointed as Lead Director and be sufficiently empowered so as to counterbalance the influence of the joint position. The role of the Lead Director is to be the principal spokesperson for the independent directors and the leading advocate for the interests of non-management shareholders. This role is especially important in instances where the interests of management and non-management shareholders differ significantly.

In situations where the roles of Chair and CEO have been newly combined, we will consider withholding our votes from the Chair of the Nominating Committee, unless there are compelling reasons to support such a leadership structure.

We believe that it is inappropriate for a CEO to immediately assume a board position on retirement. When a retiring CEO is appointed as Executive Chair, we believe that this type of arrangement can limit the ability of the board to hold management to account and ultimately reduce the level of independent board oversight of management. While there may be legitimate shorter-term reasons for such an arrangement – for instance, to ensure a smooth transition of leadership – we do not believe that the role of Executive Chair is an optimal long-term governance practice. In cases where a retiring CEO has been appointed as Executive Chair without a compelling reason for this provided by the board, we will consider withholding our votes from the Chair of the Nominating Committee and the Executive Chair. When an Executive Chair position has been created to facilitate an orderly CEO transition, we expect company disclosures to state an anticipated end date for such an arrangement. OMERS believes that a period of no more than twelve months is sufficient to allow for a smooth leadership handover.

We apply our policy flexibly under certain circumstances such as in the case of new, small, or recently reorganized corporations. However, we would expect these companies to evolve and enhance the governance practices of the corporation over time as the corporation and its resources grow.

Diversity, Qualifications, and Experience

Guideline:

We support director nominees with the appropriate qualifications, experience, and availability to properly fulfill their duties. We support the implementation and disclosure of processes for evaluating and improving board and board committee effectiveness. We may withhold votes from directors where we believe there are governance concerns, such as poor attendance or lack of adequate independence.

We support disclosure of the company's expectation for directors and their time commitment to the company. We may vote against or withhold our vote with respect to the election of candidates sitting on an excessive number of outside boards, taking into account the complexity of the other companies' businesses and the time commitment required of the director.

We support diversity of a company's directors. Boards should be sufficiently diverse to reflect a variety of perspectives and skills. We may vote against or withhold our vote for the chair of the nominating committee if a company's board lacks sufficient diversity, taking into consideration the size of the board, normal practices within the jurisdiction where the company is located, and length of time a company has been publicly listed. We encourage and support companies disclosing the diverse attributes of their directors, where possible and appropriate, in order to enable us to apply our expectations in terms of diversity.

Discussion:

A strong board composed of qualified directors should enhance corporate performance. The board's process for identifying, recruiting, nominating, appointing, orienting, and assessing directors is critical to ensuring the appropriate qualifications of the board.

An independent Nominating/Governance Committee with appropriate processes for selecting qualified candidates, proposing new nominees to the board, and assessing directors on an ongoing basis should be in place. The committee should further ensure that the board is inclusive of a diversity of perspectives and skills that will ultimately lead to better decision-making.

We encourage the adoption and disclosure of an annual assessment process for the entire board of directors as well as its committees. We encourage disclosure of director attendance records and the number of other boards on which each director is active. This helps shareholders independently assess the commitment of each board member.

Without being exhaustive, we will consider the following factors in assessing board and director effectiveness:

Overall Composition of the Board:

We will support the election of directors with the experience and qualification necessary to effectively oversee the company's business, taking into account the composition of the board as a whole. We support disclosure of a board skills matrix to indicate director expertise in the areas most relevant to a company.

Gender Diversity: As a member of the Canadian Chapter of the 30% club, we support the goal of a minimum of 30% of women on the board and at the executive management level. We will consider using our voting rights, including withholding our vote for the chair and/or members of the nominating committee, if a company board does not meet this 30% threshold and has insufficient policies, such as lack of specific goals or targets, in place to increase the number of women on its board and at the executive management level.

Character and Integrity: We will consider withholding votes from directors who have failed to demonstrate sufficient character and integrity to act in the long-term best interest of the company.

Economic Performance of the Company: We will take into consideration current and historic performance of the company in absolute and comparative terms as a factor in assessing the board's ability to generate value for shareholders.

Board's Responsiveness to Shareholders: Directors should be responsive to shareholder concerns. In situations where a shareholder proposal has received the support of a majority of shareholders, we expect the board to ensure the proposal is implemented or to provide a rationale outlining why it is in the best interests of the corporation that the board not adopt the proposal.

Attendance: We expect directors to attend at least 75% of all board and committee meetings since their last election. We may not support directors who attend less than three-quarters of all board and committee meetings consistently and without a valid reason.

Outside Board Engagements:

We recognize that directors benefit from their exposure to other company boards and management. However, directors should ensure they can commit sufficient time and effort on the company's board to discharge their duties and responsibilities effectively. We may not support directors who sit on more than five public company boards (or more than two boards if they are also an executive of a publicly traded company).

Board Tenure

Guideline:

Where the average tenure of the board of directors is twelve years or greater, OMERS will consider withholding our votes for the longest serving directors and/or the chair of the nominating committee, provided that doing so would not reduce the number of independent directors on the board to an unacceptable level.

Discussion:

While we do not set individual limits on the tenure of board members, OMERS believes that an average board tenure limit is necessary to ensure regular board refreshment while allowing for an appropriate mix of seasoned directors with institutional knowledge and new directors with fresh perspectives. While we believe that an average tenure limit of twelve years facilitates board refreshment, we also believe that a director's length of service should be reviewed regularly as part of the overall board evaluation process.

Director Independence

Guideline:

We generally support boards that have a majority of independent directors. We may withhold votes in cases where board independence appears to be compromised.

Discussion:

A board with a majority of independent directors is generally better positioned to critically evaluate management and corporate performance. A board's independence is best maintained if the majority of the directors are independent and have no direct material relationship with the corporation other than board membership and appropriate holdings in the corporation.

Independent directors include directors who are independent of management and are free of any interest or business relationship which could materially interfere with the director's ability to act in the best interests of the corporation, other than interests and relationships arising from being a shareholder. Directors who are not independent are less likely to hold management accountable if they depend on the corporation for fee income or other considerations.

Board independence may also be impeded through "interlocking directorships" where the CEO or board members sit on each other's boards. We prefer that the corporation disclose the identity of each corporation where an interlocking relationship exists for each member of the board and/or the CEO.

While a majority independent board promotes better board oversight in most circumstances, such independence may not be practicable with equity controlled companies. A shareholder with a controlling equity interest is often aligned with maximizing the company's long-term value, and its participation on the board can benefit all shareholders. In our view, it is reasonable for a controlling shareholder to have representation on the board of directors proportionate to its economic equity interest. However, consideration will be given to whether such representation has produced a strong history of good corporate performance and governance.

Director Liability

Guideline:

We support proposals that limit directors' liability and provide indemnification provided that directors have acted honestly and in good faith with a view to the best interests of the corporation.

Discussion:

Limitations on directors' liability can benefit the corporation and its shareholders by facilitating the attraction and retention of qualified directors while affording recourse to shareholders in areas of misconduct by directors. Consequently, in order to encourage the nomination of able directors, we believe that an appropriate indemnification policy is warranted. However, these policies should be limited to the director acting honestly and in good faith with a view to the best interests of the corporation and limited to the director having reasonable grounds for believing the conduct was lawful.

Quorum Requirements

Guideline:

We will review proposals to change quorum requirements for shareholder meetings on a case-by-case basis. We generally will not support reductions of quorum requirements below two persons holding 25% of the eligible vote.

Discussion:

Quorum requirements refer to the minimum number of shares and/or persons required to be present, in person or by proxy, so that business can be carried out at a meeting. Quorum requirements should be set at a reasonable level so that there is a sufficiently broad indication of shareholders' approval for the business conducted at the meeting. However, we acknowledge that in certain cases, such as smaller companies, a corporation may have difficulty achieving quorum. Accordingly, we will review these proposals on a case-by-case basis. We believe that a reasonable quorum requirement is two persons holding 25% of the eligible vote and generally will not support resolutions of quorum requirements below this level.

Independent Auditors

Guideline:

We generally will support the choice of auditors recommended by the corporation's directors, or more specifically, by the Audit Committee. However, we generally will not support the ratification of auditors when they have served for an extended period of time or if non-audit fees are greater than audit-related fees and/or instances where it appears that auditor independence might otherwise be compromised. We will also generally not support the ratification of the auditors when the audit fees have not been disclosed. We will support enhanced disclosure of all audit-related and non-audit related fees and services paid to auditors. We may vote against proposals to indemnify external auditors and are unlikely to support proposals to limit auditors' liability.

Discussion:

We believe that external auditor independence is critical. Accordingly, we will consider disclosure of non-audit fees versus audit-related fees to determine if non-audit fees are excessive, which could potentially impact independence. Indemnification or liability limiting provisions can unduly restrict shareholders' ability to pursue recourse in cases of audit failure and such protections erode market and legal discipline expected of auditors.

Compensation

We support market competitive salaries and incentives so that management remains engaged and focused on the best interests of the corporation. However, executive compensation should be reasonable, performance-based and structured in a manner that aligns management with the long-term interests of shareholders. We expect that a Compensation Committee comprised of independent directors will evaluate whether the compensation package is properly structured to enhance shareholder value.

Effective Equity Compensation

Guideline:

We support transparent, reasonable and appropriately structured equity compensation plans that reward superior performance over the long-term. Executives should be encouraged to build equity in the corporation to align their interests with those of shareholders. We will review the features of each plan together with the other aspects of total compensation, and after considering each of the issues, we will determine whether the plan overall is reasonable.

Discussion:

When reviewing equity compensation plans, we consider the following principles:

- compensation plans should properly measure and reward performance;
- performance should be based on measurable risk adjusted criteria, and be structured to account for the time horizon of risk;
- performance targets should be established at the beginning of the performance period and should only be lowered in highly exceptional circumstances with robust disclosure to justify any such change;
- corporations should promote transparency and accountability in the process of setting compensation; and
- boards are expected to show moderation in their compensation practices.

The following points clarify our views on various aspects of equity compensation:

Board Discretion: We will not support plans that give the board broad discretion in setting the terms and conditions of programs. Shareholder approval should be required when equity-based plans are instituted and when corporations seek to amend an existing plan's material terms and conditions, including eligible participants, dilution, price, or expiry terms.

Cost: We will support plans where costs are reasonable relative to the total compensation package, the company's performance, and industry practices.

Change of Control: We generally will support stock option plans with change of control provisions if the provisions do not allow option holders to receive more for their options than shareholders would receive for their shares. We will not support plans with change of control provisions if the provisions allow all equity compensation to automatically vest upon a change of control. We will not support change of control provisions developed in the midst of a change of control event that appears designed to entrench management. We will not support change of control provisions that take effect before a change of control transaction is complete. We will not support severance arrangements or “golden parachutes” given to departing executives that are excessive or that are triggered solely by a change of control. Payment of reasonable severance compensation may be justified when job loss or significant demotion occurs, but these payments should be triggered only when both a change of control and termination of employment or demotion occurs.

Concentration: We will not support plans that authorize the allocation of 20% or more of the available equity incentives in any given year to a single individual.

Dilution: We will generally support equity incentive plans if total potential dilution does not exceed 10%, and grants of options or the so-called “burn rate” is less than 2% per annum. We will review, on a case-by-case basis, equity incentive plans that provide for total potential dilution exceeding 10%, or where the “burn rate” exceeds 2% on an annual basis.

Employee Loans: We will not support the corporation making loans to employees to allow employees to pay for equity compensation. Executives seeking to borrow to buy equities under equity compensation plans should be required to obtain credit from conventional sources at market rates.

Employee Share Purchase Plans: We will support employee share purchase plans as a means of aligning employee interests with those of shareholders. We will generally approve employee share purchase plans where the purchase price is at least 85% of fair market value and the total potential dilution is less than 10%. If the company subsidizes an employee’s share purchase, the employee should be required to hold the shares for an appropriate period of time.

Fixed Number of Shares: We generally will not support plans that do not express as a fixed number the maximum number of shares that can be subject to options or other forms of equity compensation.

Expiry: We generally will support plans whose equity incentives have a life of less than five years. We will review on a case-by-case basis those plans whose equity incentives have a life of more than five years. We will not support “evergreen” or “reload” option plans.

Omnibus Plans: Omnibus plans generally refer to equity plans in which several equity awards may be granted under one plan. We are opposed to the form of omnibus plans as we believe shareholders should be able to vote on each aspect of a plan, rather than be forced to consider a “take-all” approach. Accordingly, we prefer that corporations establish separate plans for each award that can be considered and voted on separately. However, when considering an omnibus plan, we will generally assess all aspects of the plan and make a determination as to whether the plan meets our voting guidelines. Where any one aspect does not meet our voting guidelines we generally will not support the entire omnibus plan. In certain circumstances, where an omnibus plan, when viewed as a whole, appears to meet our voting guidelines, we may exercise discretion to support the plan.

Price: We generally will not support plans that permit options to be issued at a value that is less than 85% of the prevailing market price.

Re-pricing: We will not support plans that allow the board of directors to lower the exercise price of equity incentives already granted. We will not support proposals that would, directly or indirectly, reduce the exercise price of incentives already granted.

Vesting: We will support plans that have reasonable vesting periods. We will support plans that link the granting of equity incentives, or the vesting of equity incentives previously granted, to specific performance targets. We generally will not support plans that are 100% vested when granted.

Anti-Hedging and Anti-Pledging: Hedging, pledging or other financial transactions designed to off-set a decline in the company’s share price undermine the rationale behind equity compensation. An executive’s interests are not aligned with those of the company if they use hedging or pledging arrangements to protect the value of their equity compensation in the event of a decline in the company’s share price. We encourage companies to have policies which bar such practices and will not support plans that are permissive of such practices.

Recoupment: We encourage companies to enact policies that allow them to recuperate, or “claw-back”, incentive compensation in the case of a financial restatement or executive fraud or negligence.

Executive Share Ownership

Guideline:

We will support the use of compensation arrangements that require senior executives to hold a specified number of shares until the end of their tenure with the company, and ideally for at least two years after this.

Discussion:

Executive share ownership aligns the interests of executives with those of shareholders. The minimum ownership should be meaningful for the individual. The required ownership level should increase with seniority and should be expressed as a multiple of the executive's salary. Executives should be given a reasonable period of time to meet these requirements after they are adopted.

Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation (Say-on-Pay)

Guideline:

Executives of a company should be compensated such that they are incentivized to act in the best interest of shareholders. We believe that a thorough review of pay practices is an important duty that boards of directors of corporations should exercise with diligence and care. We consider the following factors when assessing votes related to executive compensation:

- pay-for-performance alignment, with an emphasis on long-term shareholder value;
- appropriate peer group and benchmarking;
- presence of risk mitigation features;
- limited, and well explained, use of discretion;
- presence of an independent and effective Compensation Committee;
- clear, comprehensive compensation disclosure; and
- the inclusion of sustainability metrics, e.g. environmental and social, in incentive plans, to the extent that these metrics are aligned with the company's strategy and long-term value creation.

Discussion:

In certain jurisdictions, advisory votes on executive compensation ("say-on-pay") are mandated by law. In other jurisdictions, advisory votes are not mandatory but have been adopted by corporations voluntarily or through shareholder resolutions. In both cases, we will review these votes or proposals on a case-by-case basis.

We will generally support the implementation of say-on-pay where:

- shareholders are asked to consider an annual non-binding advisory vote;
- the resolution provides that the vote is not intended to diminish the role and responsibilities of the board of directors;
- the resolution provides that shareholders accept the approach to executive compensation disclosed in the company's information circular;
- approval of the resolution requires an affirmative vote of a majority of the votes cast at the annual meeting of shareholders;
- the corporation will disclose the results of the advisory vote as part of its report on vote results for the meeting; and
- if a significant number of shareholders oppose the resolution, the board will consult with its shareholders and disclose a summary of the comments received in the engagement process and any planned changes to compensation plans.

We recognize that there are alternative methods available to shareholders other than say-on-pay that permit them to express concerns surrounding executive compensation, such as voting against directors, particularly Compensation Committee members. Shareholders also have the ability to consider certain compensation issues independently, such as votes relating to a corporation's option plan.

Director Compensation

Guideline:

We will support director compensation that reflects the expertise, responsibilities, and time commitment expected from directors and that aligns their interests with those of long-term shareholders. We will review these proposals on a case-by-case basis to ensure that the director compensation program aligns directors' interest with those of long-term shareholders without compromising the ability of directors to be independent.

Discussion:

We support director compensation that aligns directors' interests with those of long-term shareholders. We believe that director compensation should generally be a combination of a cash retainer and share awards. We will not ordinarily vote against director candidates simply because there is an absence of share rewards. We may do so, however, taking into consideration corporate performance and governance practices over a suitable timeframe. For reasons discussed below, share awards should not be performance based. We encourage the establishment of specified ownership requirements for directors that permits a reasonable period of time for directors to meet these requirements. We also encourage corporations to adopt holding requirements that require directors to retain a significant portion of equity grants. Director compensation, stock ownership, and holding requirements should be disclosed to shareholders on an annual basis.

We support equity-based awards as a portion of director compensation. However, we do not believe that directors should be incentivized in the same manner as executives and, for that reason, such grants should not be performance based. We believe that stock options are less effective and efficient than direct share ownership in aligning the interest of directors with those of the company. Accordingly, we generally will not support stock option plans for directors.

In addition, aside from appropriate meeting related expenses, directors should not be offered benefits or perquisites normally provided to employees such as health or life insurance, retirement benefits, or special post-retirement perquisites.

General Principles Regarding Takeover Protection

Takeover Protection

Certain takeover protection measures can be detrimental to the long-term interests of shareholders. We distinguish between “new style” shareholders’ rights agreements which may genuinely benefit shareholders and “old style” poison pills which can limit shareholders’ returns by acting as an anti-takeover device.

Guideline:

Corporations have developed various protective mechanisms to insulate from unwanted takeover bids and even competitive bidding processes. We will look at takeover protection measures on a case-by-case basis. In exercising our shareholder rights, we will vote for proposals that enhance the long-term value of our investments. We will generally not support proposals that unduly deter a bid or fail to provide equal treatment for shareholders during a takeover. We will evaluate advance notice requirements on a case-by-case basis. However, we will not support advance notice provisions that place unnecessary burdens on shareholders wishing to nominate directors.

Discussion:

We recognize that takeover protections can improve shareholder value but such protective measures should not deter unsolicited bids or follow-on offers.

Although these measures should strive to balance the interests of targets and bidders, they should primarily serve the interests of long-term shareholders. Given the complexity and size of our investments, we may find ourselves on either side or both sides of a takeover offer. As a result, we must evaluate the offer not simply in terms of its fairness from the financial point of view, but also in terms of what is in OMERS best interest.

Guideline:

We will consider the approval or ratification of shareholder rights plans on a case-by-case basis. We support shareholder rights plans that permit the board and management sufficient time to respond to takeover offers in a manner that enhances long-term shareholder value for all shareholders. We generally will not support shareholder rights plans that go beyond trying to ensure the equal treatment of shareholders and allowing the corporation sufficient time to consider alternatives, in the event of a bid.

Discussion:

A shareholder rights plan, also known as a “poison pill”, provides the shareholders of a target corporation with rights to purchase additional shares or to sell shares at very attractive prices, in the event of an unwanted offer for the corporation. These rights, when triggered, impose significant economic penalties on a hostile bidder.

Shareholder rights plans may have the following legitimate purposes: (1) providing shareholders with sufficient time to make an informed decision and consider available alternatives; (2) ensuring that all shareholders are treated equally in connection with a change of control of the company; and (3) allowing the board of the target company sufficient time to determine whether there is an alternative to the offer.

In reviewing a shareholder rights plan, we will consider the following:

- the company’s governance structure;
- equal treatment of shareholders;
- board independence; and
- existing takeover defenses.

We generally will support plans with the following attributes:

- allows for partial bids;
- the threshold for triggering the plan is at least 20% of the company’s shares;
- does not allow for the redemption of rights without shareholder ratification;
- exempts soft lock-up agreements;
- does not contain exemptions for private placements;
- does not authorize the board to waive the plan’s application unless the plan is waived for all other subsequent bids;
- places a modest limit on the granting of any “break fees”; and
- requires shareholder ratification at least every three years.

Purchase Transactions

Guideline:

We will review proposed “going private” transactions and other purchase transactions on a case-by-case basis to determine if the proposed transaction is in the best interests of OMERS.

Discussion:

A going private transaction has the effect of transforming a public corporation into a private corporation and thereby eliminating the public shareholders. In such a transaction, shareholders sell their equity interest in the corporation at a price offered by another shareholder, who assumes control.

A going private transaction may involve a group of buyers that includes management of the corporation. These transactions may provide opportunities for shareholders to maximize investment returns. However, such transactions may also have the potential to primarily serve the interests of existing management.

We will consider the following in determining whether or not a proposed transaction is in OMERS best interests:

- in the case of related party transactions:
 - a proper review was undertaken by an independent committee of the board; and
 - minority shareholders are given the opportunity to vote on the proposal separately from those shareholders who are related parties.
- other potential bidders have had an opportunity to investigate the corporation and make competing bids; and
- a valuation and/or fairness opinion has been obtained from a qualified and independent party, and the analysis and recommendations contained in that valuation or opinion support the proposal.

Reincorporation

Guideline:

We will support reincorporation proposals in cases where management and the board can demonstrate sound financial or business reasons for the proposal. However, we generally will not support reincorporation proposals that are made as part of an anti-takeover defence or solely to limit directors' liability.

Discussion:

Reincorporation involves a proposal to re-establish the corporation in a different legal jurisdiction. There are a number of legitimate reasons why a corporation may want to reincorporate, including a merger agreement, indemnification provisions, or tax savings. However, it is often a tactic used by management to frustrate a potential takeover or to limit director liability or other shareholder rights.

Shareholder Rights

Vote Items Include:

- Authorize Share Repurchase Program;
- Provide Right to Act by Written Consent; and
- Adopt Proxy Access Right.

General Principles

We believe that shareholder rights, including the right to vote at shareholder meetings, are an important component of share ownership. Certain structures or proposals have the ability to detract from shareholder rights. We will generally oppose structures or proposals that attempt to limit or subordinate the rights of shareholders. Examples of proposals that could potentially limit shareholder rights include dual-class share structures, super-majority voting rights, linked proposals, and blank-cheque preferred shares.

We will consider whether a company has sought to influence or obstruct the inclusion of proposals brought forward by shareholders, particularly where the proposal addresses a material issue. We also expect companies to provide clear and complete disclosure regarding shareholder proposals, including identifying the proponent, to enable shareholders to make an informed assessment.

Guideline:

We will review shareholder rights proposals on a case-by-case basis. We will support proposals where we believe doing so would enhance the value of our investment. We will weigh the benefits of the proposal against the possible adverse effects on the issuer and will not support shareholder proposals that place undue constraints on the issuer, its board, its management, or are targeted towards the issuer's operations (which are the responsibility of management). We will not support shareholder rights proposals if, given the ownership structure of the issuer, the proposed right would provide one shareholder, or a group of shareholders, with improper advantages.

Discussion:

We believe that shareholder rights, including special meeting rights, proxy access rights and rights to act by written consent, are important components of equity ownership.

The following points detail our views on common shareholder rights proposals:

Special Meeting Rights: These rights enable shareholders to call a meeting before the issuer's next scheduled annual general meeting. Special meeting rights should be subject to ownership requirements such as ownership thresholds and/or minimum hold periods.

not require a minimum time period holding requirement for shareholders seeking to utilize the proxy access mechanism. However in assessing these proposals, we will not withhold support for provisions setting out a reasonable holding period, such as three years.

Proxy Access Rights: These rights allow shareholders to nominate candidates for directors in the issuer's proxy materials subject to sufficient share ownership requirements. We will generally support proxy access proposals that include thresholds for size of ownership interest that are sufficient to prevent abuse by shareholders without a material interest in the issuer. We believe that shareholders can contribute meaningfully to the director nomination process and that board composition will benefit from shareholder input. We do

Rights to Act by Written Consent: These rights allow shareholders to act on issues in-between annual general meetings without holding a special meeting. Shareholders can pass a proposal through written consent by returning signed copies of consent to a proposal. The matter is ratified if the support provided by written consent is equal to or greater than the level of support the proposal would require if it were decided at a shareholder meeting.

Shareholder Meetings

Guideline:

We may withhold support from members of the governance committee where a board elects to hold a virtual only or hybrid meeting without demonstrating that shareholders participating virtually can fully exercise their rights. This includes the ability to vote in real time, ask questions, and engage with management on an equal basis with in person attendees.

Discussion:

OMERS expects companies to adopt meeting formats that uphold strong governance standards and ensure meaningful shareholder participation. We recognize that hybrid shareholder meetings—providing both in person and virtual attendance options—can enhance accessibility and broaden engagement when implemented with appropriate safeguards.

Super-Majority Voting Rights

Guideline:

We will review super-majority proposals on a case-by-case basis. We generally will not support any super-majority voting right that exceeds two thirds (66 $\frac{2}{3}$ %) of the outstanding shares, unless it is in OMERS best interest.

Discussion:

Super-majority voting rights require a level of shareholder approval above a simple majority. In some circumstances, such as certain fundamental corporate changes or actions, a super-majority approval is appropriate. However, we believe that in these circumstances, a two-thirds (66 $\frac{2}{3}$ %) approval level is sufficient. This vote requirement is reasonable and yet provides sufficient protection against unwarranted invasions on the corporation. This threshold is required by the Canada Business Corporations Act and its provincial counterparts for certain fundamental changes.

Payment of Greenmail, etc.

Guideline:

We will generally not support proposals that allow for the payment of “greenmail” to a potential undesired bidder for the corporation, or other defences that frustrate a competitive auction process and reduce shareholder value.

Discussion:

Greenmail is the payment from corporate funds of a premium price to selected shareholders (often to an undesired potential bidder for a company in an effort to suspend a threatened takeover) without the opportunity for all shareholders to participate in such a purchase program. Because these purchases are usually done at a price above the then-current market price of the company's shares, there is a transfer of value from the company to one shareholder or group of shareholders, placing the remaining shareholders at an economic disadvantage. Anti-greenmail resolutions generally require shareholder approval of a major share repurchase at prices that exceed the market, unless the same purchase price is offered to all shareholders.

Other defensive measures, such as "crown jewel" defences and excessive break-fees, can have a similar detrimental effect on shareholder value.

Linked Proposals

Guideline:

We generally will not support linked or bundled proposals except in cases where each individual issue is in OMERS best interests.

Discussion:

In certain cases, shareholders are presented with linked proposals which are resolutions that link two or more issues together. These proposals can be a way to force shareholders to approve an issue that they would otherwise not approve if presented separately. We believe that shareholders should have the opportunity to vote on each issue separately and therefore these types of resolutions should generally be discouraged.

Authorized Shares

Guideline:

We generally will support fixed increases in authorized shares of up to 25%. We will review increases in authorized shares of greater than 25% on a case-by-case basis.

Discussion:

We believe that shareholders should have the opportunity to approve the issuance of shares. When corporations request that shareholders approve an increase in the number of common shares available or “authorized” for issuance, the increase should serve a legitimate business purpose.

We generally will support proposals for the authorization of additional shares provided the amount requested is necessary for sound business reasons.

New Share Issues

Guideline:

We will review proposals for new share issues on a case-by-case basis.

Discussion:

Corporations may seek shareholder approval to issue a specific number of shares for an explicit business purpose or to obtain flexibility to meet changing competitive and economic conditions.

Despite the increased flexibility an additional issuance of shares may provide the corporation, there can also be a dilutive effect on shareholders. Consequently, we prefer issuance proposals that have pre-emptive rights attached. Pre-emptive rights allow existing shareholders to maintain their share ownership level and to ensure that new issues do not dilute current shareholders’ ownership.

We expect corporations to issue shares at a discount only if warranted by market conditions and if in the long-term interests of existing shareholders.

We will support new share issues where it is in our best interests to do so and the amount requested is clearly disclosed and for sound business reasons.

Blank-Cheque Preferred Shares

Guideline:

We generally will not support either the authorization of, or an increase in, blank-cheque preferred shares, unless the proposal is in the best interests of OMERS.

Discussion:

Blank-cheque preferred shares usually carry a preference as to dividends, rank ahead of common shares upon liquidation, and give a board broad discretion to establish voting, dividend, conversion, and other rights in respect of these shares. Blank-cheque preferred shares may provide corporations with the flexibility needed to meet changing financial conditions. However, since the rights have not been defined, shareholders may not fully understand how the rights attached to blank-cheque preferred shares may impact other classes of shares.

Share Buybacks and Dividends

Guideline:

We will support dividend and share buyback resolutions on a case-by-case basis.

Discussion:

Share buybacks can enhance long-term shareholder value by reducing the number of shares outstanding or by providing support to share prices. However, buybacks also have the potential to inflate the value of option-driven compensation. We will not support the implementation of share buyback programs that do not have sufficient disclosure regarding the number of shares which may be repurchased or reasonable purchase price limits.

We support corporate dividend payout guidelines that are in line with expected long-term earnings growth. We expect a reasonable dividend payout from mature companies with a steady, reliable profit stream. In the case of growth companies or companies that require heavy capital outlays, we understand that long-term shareholder value may be created from retaining cash to invest in the business or in acquisitions.

Environmental and Social Matters

We believe that well run organizations with sound environmental and social practices will perform better, particularly over the long-term.

Corporations should account for their behaviour and its implications for the creation of value. We support the view that companies should maintain policies and procedures with respect to these factors where they materially affect company performance. These policies should be an integral part of the overall management of a company.

General Principles on Environmental and Social Proposals

We believe that it is prudent to apply a principles-based approach to corporate responsibility given the extensive list of social and environmental challenges that companies may face, including climate change, human rights, political contributions, and workforce diversity. We will review environmental and social related proposals on a case-by-case basis. We generally will support proposals that request the reasonable disclosure of information or development of policies. We generally support shareholder resolutions that encourage disclosures which assist investors in assessing the extent to which corporate decisions may contribute to or detract from investment performance. We will not support proposals that are overly prescriptive, duplicate existing practices or disclosure, or detract from shareholder value. In addition, we will not support proposals that ask shareholders to direct corporate strategy or serve to diminish the power and/or accountability of the board of directors.

Vote Items Include:

- Say-on-Climate Proposals; and
- Proposals to Improve Human Rights Standards or Policies.

We believe that the effective management of the risks and opportunities associated with sustainability is an important part of the performance of companies in which we invest.

We support the view that companies should publish and update their environmental and social policies and procedures that materially affect long-term shareholder value. These policies should be an integral part of the overall strategy and management of a company. Accordingly, we encourage companies to develop policies and practices to address material environmental and social matters that are relevant to their businesses, including:

- the environmental impact of the corporation's products and operations;
- the impact of the corporation's strategies and decisions on the communities, including indigenous peoples and other constituencies directly affected by its products and operations;
- human rights and work standards in their operations;
- diversity throughout all levels of the corporation's workforce, with goals and timelines to increase levels of diversity at both the board and senior management level; and
- cyber security and data privacy.

We will assess the disclosure of the impact of environmental and social issues on investment risks and may engage with corporations who in our view could improve the quality of their disclosures.

We expect companies to provide reporting aligned with internationally recognized sustainability standards, including IFRS Sustainability Disclosure Standards, which enhance comparability for investors.

Where company disclosure is insufficient, not aligned with IFRS based sustainability reporting, or does not adequately address material E&S risks, OMERS may withhold support from responsible directors.

Political Contributions and Lobbying

Guideline:

We may support shareholder proposals requesting enhanced disclosure of political contributions and lobbying practices, consistent with our broader approach to managing material risks, and where existing reporting is insufficient for shareholders to assess associated risks.

Discussion:

We expect companies to provide transparent disclosure of any political contributions and lobbying activities, including the amounts spent, the nature and intent of such activities, and the governance processes that oversee them. Companies should maintain policies ensuring board level oversight of political spending and lobbying.

Climate Change

In 2015, almost 200 world leaders signed the Paris Agreement, which set the goal of limiting global warming to well below 2 degrees Celsius, and a more ambitious aim of limiting this to 1.5 degrees Celsius. This will require global emissions to reach net-zero by the middle of this century. OMERS is committed to achieving net-zero greenhouse gas emissions across its total portfolio by 2050. As a global investor, the financial returns of our portfolio are exposed to the wide range of physical, regulatory and liability risks that climate change presents. Therefore, as a fiduciary, we will assess our investee companies' efforts to mitigate the risks stemming from climate change, as well as their ability to take advantage of the opportunities that arise from the transition to a low-carbon economy.

Guideline:

We will review climate-related proposals on a case-by-case basis. We generally will support proposals that request disclosure of information on the impact of climate change on a company's operations, as well as associated policies and procedures to address risks and/or opportunities. We will not support proposals that are overly prescriptive, duplicate existing practices or disclosure, or detract from shareholder value. In addition, we will consider withholding votes from the chair of the relevant committee if, in our assessment, we believe that a company is not taking the appropriate steps to mitigate its risks stemming from climate change as well as disclosing information required for investors to make this assessment, particularly greenhouse gas emissions.

Vote Items Include:

- Climate Change/Green House Gas Emissions Proposals.

As per the OMERS Climate Action Plan, we expect the top 20 weighted average carbon intensity (WACI) contributing holdings in the OMERS portfolio to have a credible net zero transition plan in place by 2030. For companies in this category, we will consider withholding our vote for the chair of the board committee responsible for climate issues if there is a lack of progress or unresponsiveness to engagement efforts.

Discussion:

We believe that climate change and the transition to a low-carbon economy will have a significant long-term impact on the financial performance of the companies and assets in which we invest. We expect companies to disclose how their operations will be impacted by climate change, as well as the policies and procedures that have been implemented to address the risks and/or opportunities. We also expect companies to disclose their governance structure around the management of climate risks and/or opportunities, and how they ensure that they have the relevant expertise in place to underpin this. We support the recommendations by the Task Force on Climate-related Financial Disclosures (TCFD), now incorporated into the International Sustainability Standards Board (ISSB) Standards, as a way to help us assess the climate-related risks and opportunities in our portfolio, and we expect companies to report in line with these recommendations.

Emerging Risks

Guideline:

Where we assess oversight or disclosures to be insufficient on emerging and rapidly evolving issues such as cybersecurity and AI, and where we identify inadequate board level expertise, weak internal controls or evidence of significant social impact, we may consider voting against the director responsible for oversight.

Discussion:

We recognise that companies are increasingly exposed to rapidly evolving technological and operational risks that can materially affect long-term value. Boards are expected to demonstrate clear oversight, appropriate expertise and transparent disclosure in relation to these risks.

Cybersecurity remains a significant and growing threat. Companies should disclose the governance structures in place to manage cyber risk, along with timely reporting of breaches and remedial actions.

The increasing deployment of artificial intelligence also creates material risks, including discrimination, misinformation, privacy violations, higher emissions from power use and workforce impacts linked to generative technologies. We expect companies to ensure accountability across the AI value chain by aligning with evolving industry good practice and providing clear disclosure on AI use and governance.

We will continue to monitor these emerging issues and adjust our expectations as technological and regulatory landscapes evolve.
