Louisiana Ag in the Classroom at the Fast Food Farm

The Sower's Song

*With each seed, a hope is sown,
In fertile ground, future grown.
The sower's song, a melody,
Of life, love, and legacy.*

This short and sweet poem about farming might just as well describe the toil of a teacher... like farmers, they're up before the sun, and their work is never done. The fruits of their labors keep our world going, and yet they do it all in humble service to a greater good. Whether it's in soil or in the hearts and minds of young learners, planting a seed reflects hope in what the future holds. So, who better than a teacher to show youngsters the impact that agriculture has in their everyday lives?

That's precisely the reason that educators from around the state gathered on a recent hot July day for the second annual Ag in the Classroom workshop held at the Fast Food Farm in Gramercy, Louisiana. With hands-on activities that ranged from making homemade sugar scrub and lip balm to learning about the life cycle of chickens and identifying the different parts of plants we eat, this event was a mix of fun and fellowship, all with an agricultural education twist.

Looking around the teaching farm, which is surrounded by sugarcane fields, it's hard to believe there are students enrolled in Louisiana's K-12 schools that don't know much about agriculture. But it's true. In this day and age, even in Louisiana, even for kids who grow up "in the country," many of them don't know where their food comes from or the world of wide-ranging careers available to those in the field. That's where Louisiana Ag in the Classroom and the Fast Food Farm come in.

Agriculture in the Classroom (AIRC) is a national USDA program that can be carried out in each state according to their needs and interests. Here in Louisiana, Ag in the Classroom is coordinated by the Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation.

Louisiana Ag in the Classroom provides resources and training for teachers to effortlessly integrate agriculture into their curriculum. The program helps teachers sow seeds of curiosity and understanding while teaching students about the food, fiber, and fuel systems that agriculture supports. Even better, the free, ag-themed lessons support core subjects and align with Louisiana Student Standards.

Depending on the topics and grade level, it's easy to see how AIRC lesson plans touch all subject areas, including ELA, health, math, science, social studies,

COMMISSIONER'S CORNER

Celebrating LDAF's inaugural student interns

MIKE STRAIN, DVM
COMMISSIONER

This year, the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry (LDAF) hosted its Inaugural Summer Student Internship Program, which wrapped up last month. For eight weeks this summer, interns Faith Woods and Kaelyn Hill learned about the many aspects of the work LDAF does with hands-on training in their respective sections.

Faith Woods, a senior at Southern University and A&M College majoring in Agricultural Business, spent her time in LDAF's Agricultural Environmental Sciences Division. She assisted with everything from crop pest inspections and sample testing at the Ag Chemistry Lab to grocery store checks, legal hearings, and more.

Kaelyn Hill, also a student at Southern University, is pursuing a degree in Agricultural Sciences. During her time in LDAF's Animal Health and Food Safety Division, Kaelyn assisted with field inspections, livestock tagging and microchipping, emergency pet evacuation processes, and more.

Congratulations to Faith and Kaelyn for completing the LDAF Internship Program! You rose to all challenges we presented you with, and we look forward to seeing what the future holds for both of you.

We also look forward to more student internships and expect to begin accepting applications for the next summer cycle around the first of the year. The program is currently open to college juniors and seniors in any majors, not just agriculture, as there are a wide

LOUISIANA LOCAVORES CRAWFISH QUESADILLAS

Submitted by Louisiana Locavores

Ingredients:

6 Louisiana Locavores Sweet Potato Tortillas
 1 lb Louisiana crawfish tails
 2 Tbsp. butter plus more for frying
 1 ½ tsp. Cajun Spice
 Few dashes Louisiana Locavores Vicious Verde Hot sauce (or other green hot sauce), to taste
 3 c. favorite shredded cheese
 Noni's Kitchen Hot Lava for finishing
 Chopped cilantro and white onion for garnish, if desired

Instructions:

Set oven to warm. Melt butter over medium heat in a skillet and add crawfish tails, Cajun spice, and hot sauce, and cook until liquid is reduced and thick but not completely dry. Pour crawfish mixture into a bowl and set aside. Wipe out skillet, melt a little more butter in pan over medium low heat, add tortilla. Layer half cup cheese, 1/3 of crawfish mixture, another half cup of cheese, and top with second tortilla. Cover skillet and cook until cheese is well melted and bottom tortilla is crisp, roughly 4 minutes. Flip quesadilla, cover skillet again, and cook until second tortilla is crisp and cheese is well melted, roughly 2 minutes. Put finished quesadilla in warm oven while cooking remaining quesadillas. To serve, cut into wedges, top with drizzle of Hot Lava sauce, and garnish with herbs and onions. Serve hot and enjoy!

PECAN CANDY

Submitted by Curvy Creole

Ingredients:

½ stick butter
 2 cups sugar
 1 can evaporated milk or (1 cup heavy whipping cream)
 2 c. pecan halves
 1 tsp. vanilla extract
 Wax paper

Instructions:

In saucepan add butter, sugar, and evaporated milk and cook about 20 minutes on a medium heat until it comes to a boil. Stir occasionally and continue cooking until mixture forms a small ball in cold water. Add pecans when it begins to simmer. Remove from heat; add vanilla and stir until mixture begins to lose its gloss. Next drop small portions onto waxed paper. (Put foil under waxed paper to keep it from sticking to your countertop)

BBQ GLAZED CRABS

CERTI-FRIED!

The reasons fewer farmers are now responding to USDA's NASS surveys — and the impact of waning participation

By Jim Wiesemeyer, www.drovers.com

U.S. taxpayer-funded government reports on the economy and agriculture have generated comments from stakeholders and others, especially since the Internet has made it easier for anyone to comment.

We decided to check in on response rates for USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) reports after a new study by the American Statistical Association warned the reliability of U.S. economic data is at risk due to shrinking budgets, declining survey response rates and potential political interference (this is not the case with NASS reports). Currently, government statistics remain dependable, but the study, authored by statisticians from various institutions including George Mason University and the Urban Institute, likens the statistical system to infrastructure that is often neglected until a crisis occurs. (The New York Times addressed the matter in this article.)

Response rates have been declining over time:

- In the early 1990s, response rates for NASS crop surveys were 80% to 85%.
- By the late 2010s, response rates had fallen below 60% in some cases.

Recent response rates for NASS surveys:

- The 2022 Census of Agriculture had a response rate of 61%; The 2017 Census of Agriculture had a response rate of 71.5%.
- For monthly NASS surveys, response rates are around 75%; For quarterly or annual NASS surveys, response rates are around 50% to 60%.

Factors affecting response rates:

- Increasing difficulty in accessing households due to new telephone technologies.
- Rising refusal rates from respondents — "It's mostly inability to reach people that's increasing. Actual refusals are fairly steady," Honig says.
- Concerns about data privacy and time constraints from farmers.
- Increased number of people requesting information from farmers.

Impact of declining response rates:

- Reduced statistical precision of estimates, especially at the county level.
- Fewer counties for which estimates can be published.
- Potential introduction of bias if non-respondents differ from respondents.

USDA NASS efforts to address declining response rates:

- Offering online response options.
- Developing shorter questionnaires.
- Adjusting sampling and weighting procedures.
- Increasing follow-up efforts through multiple contact methods.
- Increased outreach efforts to build relationships/trust and increase transparency (i.e. #StatChat, Data Users' Meetings, Visitors to Lockup, etc.)

Importance of response rates:

- High response rates are crucial for maintaining data quality and reliability.
- Lower response rates can lead to increased costs for data collection.
- Accurate data is essential for policymaking, research and agricultural planning.

Bottom line

NASS continues to monitor response rates and implement strategies to improve participation in their surveys, recognizing the critical importance of high-quality agricultural data.

Comments from Lance Honig, Director of Methodology Division and Chair, Agricultural Statistics Board of USDA's NASS:

"Every producer who receives a NASS survey has an opportunity to improve the accuracy of the results by completing it, which leads to better decisions, better policy, and increased market efficiency. That's a win for everyone."

"While surveys remain the backbone of our estimates, we incorporate additional information into our process, including administrative data from across USDA, geospatial information, and more. This helps to improve accuracy while reducing the volume of survey contacts we have to make, therefore reducing the burden placed on farmers. We continue to explore additional data sources as we look to the future, but remain committed to utilizing the most reliable information available today."

Comments from USDA top economist Dr. Seth Meyer:

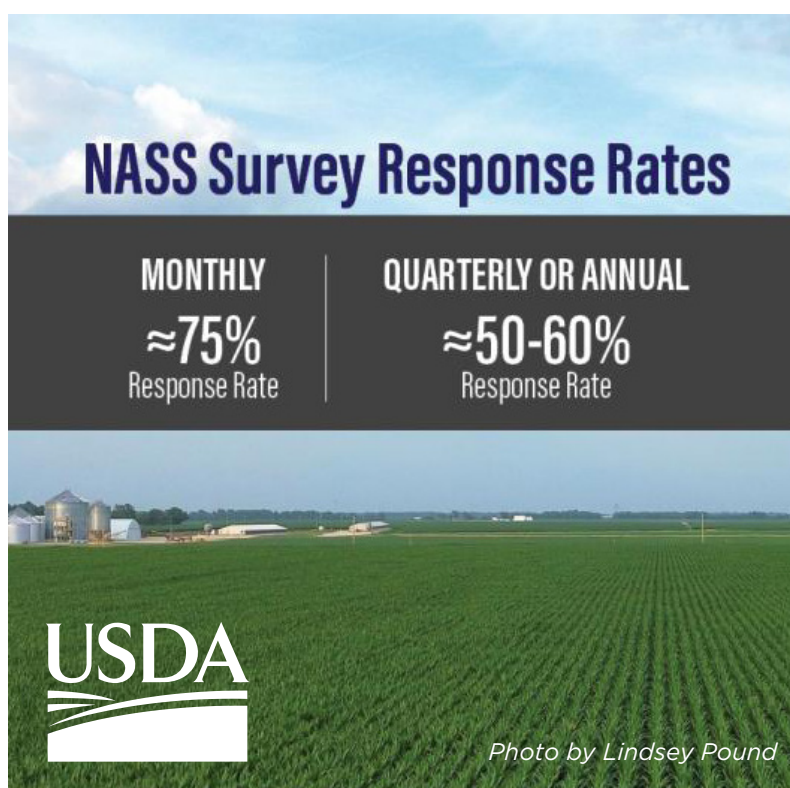

"I always try to explain to producers why responding [to surveys] is in their best interest. They might not always like the way prices move when the report is released (at least not half the time) but these reports level the playing field every 30 days. They are at a disadvantage to large grain traders able to accumulate more information; NASS reports resolve some of this information asymmetry each month."

"There is a lot of value in NASS reports, value that isn't as flashy as a new program or initiative but lays the foundation for a lot of decision making across the country by producers and others. I think it is always important for us at USDA to make the case, and I think it is a good case, that these reports are a benefit to the sector and not only help market function but result in better policy formation in DC and in the state capitals."

Comments from former top USDA economist Dr. Joe Glauber:

"Earth observation data and AI technologies are becoming increasingly accurate at measuring area and predicting yields. While we still ground truth a lot of those data against NASS surveys, those methodologies will become increasingly prevalent and may ultimately become the gold standard."

"USDA's original function was providing research and development for farmers (through seed development and distribution) and providing information on prices, production, etc. These remain public goods that I would argue are still relevant today as they were in the 1860s."

Ag in the Classroom
Louisiana

agriscience, chemistry, civics, earth, life, physical, and environmental sciences, physics, history, and geography!

Louisiana Ag in the Classroom State Coordinator Lynda Danos, a former high school biology teacher who has led the program for over 20 years, lauds their network of partners and dedicated volunteers who help make the program a success.

That network includes the Fast Food Farm, a nonprofit, agri-educational farm in St. James Parish. Its name reflects the organizers' desire to connect kids to the food they eat. No matter what kind of food it is or where it comes from, it's not possible without agriculture.

In addition to hosting field trips year-round, the Fast Food Farm is known for their popular St. James Parish Ag Days in the spring and fall, where they welcome school groups of all ages. Partnering with local sponsors, FFA and 4-Hers, as well as their dedicated volunteers, the event offers a wide variety of interactive, hands-on, educational activities that teach kids where their food comes from and the role agriculture plays in our everyday lives.

This past spring, to mark 25 years of their massive impact on agricultural education, the Fast Food Farm celebrated with a "Taste of St. James" fundraiser showcasing food from local farms and chefs. Aside from the rave reviews, support from their sponsors and community help them keep their mission alive, says Executive Director Denise Hymel.

Hymel, a hardworking, passionate leader who created the Fast Food Farm, is quick to credit the supportive community of St. James Parish with the continued success and growth of the operation.

Are you an educator who would like to bring the world of agriculture to your students? Read on to check out some of the resources and programs that Louisiana Ag in the Classroom offers for interested teachers.

Materials and resources for classrooms, educators, & families

- Interactive Louisiana ag map — Take an agricultural tour through the state of Louisiana and learn where your food, fuel and fiber come from. Find out more about the individual commodities that comprise Louisiana agriculture and see the top commodities produced in each parish with this interactive map. Check out the map at aitcla.org/commodity-map
- Make & takes — These fun, hands-on activities can be used to reinforce educational concepts with the help of agriculture. Learn about plants and animals, the economy, the environment, careers and nutrition through science experiments, tasty recipes, arts and crafts, creative writing and more. See examples and download activities at aitcla.org/make-and-takesPlant

At the training, volunteers led educators through hands-on activities, each accompanied by related lesson plans, instructions, and grade-appropriate guidance. Here are just a few of them:

- 1) Bee experiment — Students learn how pollination happens as bees buzz from flower to flower.
- 2) Seed balls — Students learn about planting and make seed balls for a butterfly garden.
- 3) Worm composting — Students learn about vermiculture (worm composting).
- 4) Mini greenhouses — Students learn about seed germination and the water cycle.
- 5) Pizza time — Students learn how long it takes to grow the ingredients used in pizza.
- 6) From flower to hive — Students learn how bees collect nectar and give it a try themselves.

Kids can color their way through Louisiana agriculture with fun, fact-filled coloring pages available at aitcla.org/commodity-coloring.

- Lesson plans — Ag in the Classroom makes it easy for educators to incorporate agriculture into your classroom with lesson plans written for teachers by teachers. Louisiana Ag in the Classroom helps teachers integrate agriculture into existing curriculum with lessons aligned to Louisiana Student Standards. Lesson plans are organized by grade and subject. Find lesson plans at aitcla.org/lesson-plans
- Curriculum matrix — The National Ag Literacy Curriculum Matrix is an online, searchable and standards-based curriculum map for K-12 teachers. It contextualizes national education standards in science, social studies and nutrition education with relevant instructional resources linked to Common Core Standards.

Programs & training for educators

- Ag literacy program — This program seeks to cultivate agricultural literacy by sharing the story of agriculture with elementary students across the state. The program's book for 2024 was "Honeybee: The Busy Life of Apis Mellifera," by Candace Fleming and Eric Rohmann. Information about the 2025 Louisiana Ag Literacy Program will be available in December.
- Educator workshops — New ideas and materials, hands-on activities, and lessons aligned to Louisiana State Standards are shared each fall at the comprehensive workshop. You'll also get training and resources to integrate agriculture into existing curriculum. These may count as Continuing Learning Units (CLUs).

- Teacher of the year — This annual award recognizes a Louisiana teacher for achievements and efforts teaching students the importance of agriculture. Congratulations to the 2024 Louisiana Ag in the Classroom Teacher of the Year Chantelle Hataway! Applications for the 2025 award will be available September 15. Learn more about Hataway and previous winners at aitcla.org/teacher-of-the-year.
- Sow, Grow, & Know newsletter — Sign up with your email address to receive news, updates, and tips for the classroom.

As a new school year starts, we hope all our students and teachers have a fantastic year. Whether you're a teacher, parent, or volunteer, we encourage you to support ag education in your neck of the woods. While you're at it, thank a teacher and a farmer... they're sowing the seeds of our future!

Aquaculture + hydroponics = AQUAPONICS

Recently, LDAF's Produce Safety team visited Ken Rust, owner of Enterprise Aquatics in Marrero, LA. At The Urban Aquafarm & Training Center, Ken operates a few aquaponic systems.

What is aquaponics? Why is it important?

Aquaponics combines aquaculture and hydroponics by using dissolved and captured fish waste as fertilizer for growing plants hydroponically in water instead of soil.

When most people think of agriculture, they envision acres and acres of cane fields, big tractors, and herds of cattle. Aquaponics is much more versatile, so much so that people across the world are doing it in warehouses, greenhouses, and even their homes or garages.

Advantages of this growing method are smaller footprint, good adaptation to urban farming, year-round production capability, higher yields, and faster growth rates, as well as using less water than traditional soil-based agriculture.

One of the most common systems is deep water culture (DWC) and is one of the systems Ken has set up at his aqua farm in Marrero. In DWC, the plants are grown on floating rafts with the roots hanging down into water delivered from the fish culture tanks. The water contains dissolved nutrients and is aerated to keep oxygen levels high and maintain good water quality.

The water starts in the fish tank and as the fish live, their waste gets mixed in with the water, that same water is then pumped through a filter that uses microbiology to convert ammonia from the fish to nitrate for the plants. The filtered culture water runs underneath the floating rafts where it then is in contact with only the plant roots to supply nutrition. Solid waste is collected and removed from the system with a filter and then used to develop a concentrated filtered nutrient rich product, which is like a "compost-tea", this can be delivered to other plants in a totally separate hydroponic growing system for growing more leafy greens or fruiting crops. The water that encounters the plants is micro-nutrient rich and full of oxygen from the aerator as well as nitrates which plants feed on for growth and photosynthesis.

You may be asking yourself, "This is great and all, but now I have to take care of fish too?" The answer to that is NO! Another part of Ken's operation is taking the waste that the filter catches from the fish in his aquaponic system and further filtering into water ready to be consumed by hydroponic plants. Ken is not alone in doing this process; in this industry, excess fish waste can go for $72 per gallon. Through this aquaponic system, plants can grow up to 20% faster. On top of that, as soon as you harvest your crops, you plant again, no need to wait for the season. The demand for year-round crops is a pressure that isn't going away. Plants grown with aquaponics are lettuce, tomatoes, peppers, and much more including micro greens which can be up to 40 times more nutrient dense.

Along with his own operation, Ken also helps set up aquaponic systems for farmers and schools in Louisiana. FFA, Agriscience, and STEM programs have begun teaching these methods to students interested in agriculture and innovation. For example, the LA School for the Deaf and Visually Impaired, Eva Legard, The Brighton School, Istrouma HS, Denham Springs Jr. High, and Westdale Middle School are all engaged in teaching aquaponics. Ken has installed systems and taught so many about the benefits and value of aquaponics. This is the same technology that Disney World's Epcot uses in their aquaponics display. The filters used there were developed by Dr. Ron Malone in LSU Civil Engineering.

Thanks, Enterprise Aquatics! The LDAF Produce Safety team enjoyed learning more about emerging agriculture techniques.

SWCD Spotlight

Sabine SOIL & WATER CONSERVATION DISTRICT

The Sabine Soil and Water Conservation District (SWCD) was established in 1939 to guide conservation assistance to private landowners in Sabine Parish. The SWCD's efforts in conservation are complimented by cooperating partner agencies and other professionals for development of a comprehensive conservation plan which includes a detailed natural resources inventory and conservation practice prescriptions, all at the landowners' request.

Each plan includes identification of natural resource concerns and their interrelations, then determining the best whole-system management approach to addressing each, also known as a Resource Management System (RMS) plan.

To that end, each year Sabine SWCD hosts a locally led meeting, inviting all local stakeholders to discuss local resource concerns. Those concerns are then assessed and prioritized thereby helping direct technical and financial assistance decisions that the district, along with the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) make throughout the year.

For example, recent meetings revealed a heightened awareness and concern about the overpopulation of feral hogs and their impact on natural resources in Sabine Parish. Feral swine compete for food with native wildlife, prey on small animals, reptiles, and birds, and can transmit diseases. They root up plants and crops, induce soil erosion on cropland, pasture, and hay lands. In fact, according to the LSU AgCenter feral hogs cause $76 million a year in agricultural damage in Louisiana.

Through collaboration with LDAF's Office of Soil and Water Conservation, Sabine SWCD purchased two Pig Brig net traps. In two years, the district has provided the trap to 40 landowners, who have trapped over 130 hogs on private lands. This has been a huge asset for local landowners and the entire parish as we all work toward preserving our valuable natural resources.

Sabine SWCD "at a glance"
Land area	647,500 acres
Water area	97,000 acres
Forestland	478,500 acres
Grazing land	51,000 acres
SWCD cooperators	864

To further public awareness of natural resources in Sabine Parish, the Sabine SWCD reaches over 2,000 students and 120 educators through the many conservation events they conduct throughout the year. Here are a few of them:

- Zwolle Tamale Fiesta is an educational day for third grade students in the parish, with over 300 students attending. Held the second weekend in October, it celebrates the area's Spanish ancestry and teaches the importance of being good stewards of the land, as well as native plant species in wetlands and other habitats.
- For over 30 years, Sabine SWCD has hosted a youth Fish Fest to encourage youth outdoor involvement and highlight the district to local cooperators, businesses, and partners. The Toledo Bend Lake Association (TBLA) has partnered for the last 15 years, providing $3,000 to the event, as well as donations and sponsorships from local businesses. This outdoor fishing tournament on Toledo Bend Lake and is open to the public from 6-18 years old, testing their angling abilities and teaching contestants about the watershed, aquatic life it supports, and the importance of keeping our water clean. Over 40 students participated in this year's event, which took place June 22, 2024.

- Sabine SWCD also takes part in the National Association of Conservation Districts (NACD) poster contest each year, open to students in grades 4-12. In 2023, four schools participated, with over 100 entries submitted.

Sabine SWCD believes that educating our youth on the importance of conservation and protection of our natural resources is critical to Louisiana's future.

Hunters for the Hungry hosts Clean Out Your Freezer Day

Find your drop-off location and donate this month

Hunters For The Hungry Louisiana (H4H) is coming off of a record breaking year for donations and asking Louisiana to make more room in their freezer for the upcoming hunting season by donating all frozen goods to one of the drop-off locations throughout the state for the annual Clean Out Your Freezer Day on August 18, 2024.

While most drop-off locations are open on August 18 only, H4H encourages everyone to visit www.cleanoutyourfreezer.com to check ALL drop-off times and dates in their community as some may begin on August 12th or run as late as August 24th. Hunters For The Hungry Louisiana will accept any properly packaged, labeled, and dated game, fish, or other protein, as well as other frozen food at the multiple drop-off locations.

“Moving Clean Out Your Freezer Day to late August last year proved to be a success with the record breaking pounds of donations. We want to continue to make it convenient for all sportsmen as they’re preparing for the upcoming hunting season and possibly unloading from the fishing season,” says Julie Grunewald, executive director of Hunters For The Hungry Louisiana. “We’ve also continued to make the drop-off locations more convenient so you’ll find that we’re hosting at more markets, specifically with a few more Rouses Markets on the schedule. We feel this will be easier for everyone, especially as they’re shopping for the week ahead.”

Nearly 22,000 pounds of frozen goods were collected from Clean Out Your Freezer Day 2023, a significant increase from the 16,000 pounds in 2022. Between this and the collection of hog, deer, and fish from generous Louisiana Sportsmen, H4H provided over 193,900 pounds of protein, resulting in over 775,600 plates served for the needy throughout Louisiana. The distribution goes through the five (5) major food banks in Louisiana, as well as direct to shelters and kitchens and other agencies.

With the support of local food banks, churches, and community betterment organizations, H4H hosts a 2024 Clean Out Your Freezer Day drop-off location in the following cities and regions:

Alexandria	Baton Rouge
Central	Clinton
Covington	Denham Springs
Eunice	Gonzales
Houma	Lafayette
Lake Charles	Marksville
Monroe	Natchez
Natchitoches	New Orleans (Metairie)
Opelousas	Ruston (Dubach)
Shreveport	Slidell
St. Francisville	Thibodaux
Winnfield	Youngsville

USDA seeks nominations for fruit & veg advisory committee

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) is seeking nominations from specialty crop stakeholders to serve on the Fruit and Vegetable Industry Advisory Committee (FVIAC). The deadline for nominations is Sept. 3, 2024.

The Secretary of Agriculture will appoint up to 25 individuals, for two-year terms, to succeed members whose terms expire Oct. 28, 2024.

Detailed information about the advisory committee’s background, candidate qualifications, requirements and forms are available on USDA’s Agricultural Marketing Service website on the FVIAC Nomination Information webpage (www.ams.usda.gov/about-ams/fviac-nomination-information).

Nomination packages may be submitted by email to SCPFVIAC@usda.gov, which is preferred, or mailed to: Jennie M. Varela, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Attn: Fruit and Vegetable Industry Advisory Committee, 1124 1st Street South, Winter Haven, FL, 33880.

Established in 2001, the FVIAC is administered by USDA’s Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS). Committee members represent the spectrum of the fruit and vegetable industry including shippers, wholesalers, brokers, retailers, processors, fresh cut processors, foodservice suppliers, state agencies, state departments of agriculture and trade associations. The FVIAC meets at least twice a year to develop recommendations on issues affecting the U.S. produce industry.

USDA encourages nominees who reflect the full diversity of the produce sector in terms of size and scale of operation, industry role, demographic characteristics, geographic location and production methods. Qualified candidates include active members of the fruit and vegetable industry serving in one of the above-mentioned agricultural capacities.

Information about the committee can be found at www.ams.usda.gov/about-ams/facas-advisory-councils/fviac.

FREE WEBINAR: Combating heat & cold stress for forestry workers

Wednesday, August, 21 • 12-1 PM (CT)

Forestry workers may be subject to extreme heat and cold. Working outdoors makes people more likely to become dehydrated and experience heat-related illness or heat stress.

High temperatures reduce work capacity and may lead to heat stress and dehydration. Although exposure to heat stress is preventable, thousands become sick from occupational heat exposure every year, and some cases are fatal. Similarly, cold weather can reduce dexterity, blood flow, muscle strength, and balance. Hypothermia, frostbite, trench foot, and chilblains are all illnesses and injuries caused by cold stress.

However, forestry workers can avoid heat-related illness and cold stress with proper information and preventative action. This presentation will explore both weather-related conditions and their impact on outdoor workers. Register at https://us02web.zoom.us/webinar/register/WN_sg-KOZOiQMO5EIDmm7uepA#/registration.
