PRAGERU LEADERSHIP COUNCIL

For many years, we have worked closely with trusted voices who embody Dennis's values—producing meaningful content together and sharing the stage at our events. This year, we took a significant step forward by formally establishing the PragerU Leadership Council. This distinguished group provides moral and intellectual guidance to our Executive Team and Board of Directors, helping us navigate complex challenges and ensure that our decisions remain grounded in timeless principles.

MESSAGE FROM MARISSA STREIT

CEO of PragerU

Dear Friend,

This may be the most important moment in PragerU's history.

We are doing more than ever before—not out of ambition, but out of conviction. We believe we are living through a time of spiritual revival in America. At PragerU, we feel deeply called to serve this moment, to meet its demands with faith, courage, and clarity.

It's no coincidence that America's 250th birthday is fast approaching. As this milestone draws near, we find ourselves presented with extraordinary opportunities to shape the hearts and minds of the next generation. And our response has been unwavering: Yes—yes to truth, yes to responsibility, yes to the future of this great country.

At times, the load we carry may feel heavy. Are we taking on too much? Perhaps. But when God calls us to act, we do not say no. We believe we are obligated to use every gift we've been given for the good of our nation and the values that sustain it. We do so without hesitation and without regret.

This year's Annual Report has been the most difficult we've ever put together—because this has been one of the most difficult seasons we've ever known. Dennis, the heart and moral compass of PragerU, remains in the hospital recovering from his tragic injury. We've also endured the heartbreaking loss of our dear friend and fellow warrior for truth, Charlie Kirk.

And yet, even in the face of hardship, we've been entrusted with more opportunities to impact America than ever before. How do we capture all of this—pain, purpose, and progress—in one report?

We choose to focus on the miracles.

To hold God in our hearts is to take on the hard work—and then to witness His blessings. The doors that have opened, the people who have joined us, the lives that have been changed through our content—these are not coincidences. They are miracles. This report is a testimony to those miracles and to the tireless work of the team that brings them to life.

As we approach the holiday season, we reflect with deep gratitude. Every success we've achieved has only been possible because of you—our growing community of supporters and fellow believers in truth, liberty, and the American ideal. Together, we are reaching more young people, more families, and more hearts than ever before.

To help us steward this great responsibility, we launched the PragerU Leadership Council—a group of wise thinkers and moral leaders who embody Dennis's timeless values. This council not only appears in our content but also advises us on critical matters and ensures that PragerU remains guided by the same moral clarity that Dennis has always championed.

Looking ahead, we are preparing for a historic year—America's 250th birthday. With your support, and by the grace of God, PragerU will continue to bring American pride, wisdom, and joy to a generation that so desperately needs it.

We are honored to be on this journey with you.

With heartfelt gratitude,

Marissa Streit
PragerU CEO

Our Co-Founder DENNIS PRAGER

As many of you know, Dennis has been sidelined this past year while recovering from a serious neck injury. We know how much you've missed seeing him in new Fireside Chats and hearing his voice on the radio. That's why, in this Annual Report, we want to share with you as much of Dennis's timeless wisdom, love of country, and contagious joy as possible.

Message from Dennis

I am a third-generation American—my parents and my maternal grandmother were born in Brooklyn, New York.

But I didn't know I loved America until my early twenties.

In my third year of college, I studied in England and began a life of travel that eventually took me to 130 countries.

That was when I began to understand how important America was to the world—and still is.

That was when I began to understand how unique America was—and still is.

That was when I began to appreciate the decency of the American people.

Being away from America for a year, spending the Christmas season in Morocco, where there was no Christmas season, and ending the year with a month in the Soviet Union, where there was no freedom—this all had a life-changing impact on me. I realized how lucky I was to be an American.

I even realized how much I simply enjoyed being an American.

I'll explain:

How important America is to the world.

Without in any way diminishing the enormous sacrifices made by England and France, it was America's entry into World War I that made the defeat of Imperial Germany possible, and ended that horrible war.

It was America that made the Allied victory possible in World War II, and kept Western Europe free during the Cold War.

Thirty-seven thousand Americans died fighting the North Korean and Chinese communist regimes. Were it not for America, all of Korea would have no human rights and would endure the mass torture, starvation, and murder that have been routine in North Korea until today.

The next time you hear the lie that America fought in Vietnam for colonialist reasons, ask that person: Why did America fight in Korea? I'll tell you why: to stop the spread of communism, the greatest genocidal and totalitarian ideology in history, and thereby enable more than half of Korea to live in freedom.

Another 58,000 Americans died in Vietnam to enable the South Vietnamese to live in the same freedom America made possible for South Koreans. Neither Vietnam nor Korea had any natural resources that America wanted. Americans died in those two countries solely so that their people could be free.

And, without diminishing the role of the great British prime minister, Margaret Thatcher, and the great pope, John Paul II, it was America that ended communism in the Soviet Union, Poland, East Germany, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Romania, and Bulgaria, and liberated, among other nations, Ukraine, Azerbaijan, Latvia, Lithuania, and Estonia.

America is unique.

America is the only country that was founded not on a race, ethnicity, or nationality, but on an idea: limited government—because the founders of America believed, first and foremost, in liberty.

America became the freest country in world history, which is why France gave the Statue of Liberty to one country: America. And America has given more liberty and opportunity to more people from more nations than any country in world history. Yes, America allowed slavery in half of its states. But every society in the world practiced slavery. What rendered America unique is that Americans killed one another in its bloodiest war to abolish slavery, and that it eventually became the least racist multi-racial country in history.

It remains the only white-majority country to have ever elected a black leader. And Africans know how good America is, which is why, by the 1980s, more black Africans had come to America voluntarily as immigrants seeking freedom and opportunity than ever came as slaves.

Americans are decent people.

Ask visitors what they think of Americans, and they are likely to tell you how friendly Americans are.

There are mean and bad Americans, and there are kind and good people in every country. But having traveled abroad every year of my life since college, and to all fifty American states, and being sensitive to people's goodness and happiness, I have been continually amazed at the essential decency of most Americans.

I fell in love with America at the age of twenty, and given the freedom, the opportunities, and the religious tolerance I have experienced, I realize all these years later that America has loved me too.

MORE WISDOM FROM DENNIS PRAGER

While visiting Dennis in the hospital, we asked him a few questions about the past year. We trust you'll find his answers inspiring.

Q: Dennis, are you still grateful to be alive despite the physical challenges you've faced over the past year?

Dennis:

You know I talk about everything with callers to my radio show. I don't remember how the subject came up, but about 15 or 20 years ago, some guy called in and said he'd rather be dead than a quadriplegic. And I, in a rare moment for me, sort of yelled at a caller, and I said, "You gotta be kidding. You have your mind and you can speak, and you'd rather be dead because you can't move your limbs?"

And irony of ironies, my theory was tested. That's exactly my condition, and I'm thrilled to be alive. I am. We are all in our minds and our ability to communicate. Would I wish I could move my limbs? I dream about moving my limbs almost every night. Of course, I would love it. But I'm alive, and I have my loved ones, and I have the public, and I think I could still make a difference. Would I rather be dead? It's inconceivable. Just, I love life, and I love so many people. Of course, I love my wife and my kids and my grandkids...Now, I will tell you one other interesting thing. I have a book on happiness. Twenty-six years ago, it was published by HarperCollins. Happiness Is a Serious Problem. I would not change a word. That is how philosophically prepared I was for this terrible thing that I have encountered. I mean, when I wrote about expectations, and you know my motto: "If nothing's horrific, life is terrific." And I live by that. I never thought that anything horrific would happen to me.

Q: You're living up to your values. Do you think America is living up to its values?

Dennis:

Well, what is it? Was it [Benjamin] Franklin who said it? It's "a republic, if you can keep it." And it is only sustainable by a religious and moral population. That's correct. A moral and religious people. We think we can have secular wisdom. There are secular individuals with wisdom, but there are no secular institutions with wisdom. Wisdom begins with the fear of the Lord, it says in Psalms. And that's correct. There is religious wisdom, but there isn't secular wisdom. And wisdom is the root of goodness. Good intentions are not the root of goodness. Wisdom is. We're in trouble. We send our kids to universities—and especially prestigious universities—where they are taught by teachers with no wisdom. Hence moral confusion. And you can have any number of students and professors marching on behalf of what is literally today's Nazis, the organization called Hamas. That's really something.

Q: Has America been a force for good or has it been a force for ill in the world?

Dennis:

That patriotic conservative Americans are asking these questions is nothing more than a sad example of how moral confusion has not only affected the left. Let's say there was no America in the twentieth century—would communism have been vanquished? No. Would the Nazis have been vanquished? No. Would Japan have been vanquished? The Japanese empire. The answer is no. Was America a force for good in the least-known major war America has ever fought—the Korean War?

That is as good an example—as clear an example as possible—of America serving as a force of goodness. We had absolutely no interest, no military-, no economic interest in Korea. I would venture to say that most of the 37,000 American men who died in the Korean War in the early '50s could not point to where Korea was on a map of the world. Yet they went. They fought. They died in large numbers to defend whatever part of the country could be defended from being taken over by communist totalitarianism. And if you want to know what South Korea would be like had Americans who fought in Korea and died in the dozens of thousands of numbers, just look at North Korea. That's what it would have been like. A nation of automatons created by communist, totalitarian puppet masters. And I, again, I emphasize, America gained nothing for itself by fighting in the Korean War...

AMERICA NEEDS A JULY FOURTH SEDER

Perhaps the major reason Jews have been able to keep their national identity alive for 3,000 years—the last 2,000 of which were nearly all spent dispersed among other nations—is ritual. No national or cultural identity can survive without ritual, even if the group remains in its own country.

Americans knew this until the era of anti-wisdom was ushered in by the Baby Boomer generation in the 1960s and '70s. We always had national holidays that celebrated something meaningful.

When I was in elementary school, every year we would put on a play about Abraham Lincoln to commemorate Lincoln's birthday and a play about George Washington to commemorate Washington's birthday. Unfortunately, Congress made a particularly foolish decision to abolish the two greatest presidents' birthdays as national holidays and substituted the meaningless Presidents Day. Beyond having a three-day weekend and department store sales, the day means nothing.

Columbus Day is rarely celebrated, since the European founding of European civilization on American soil is not politically correct.

Christmas has become less nationally meaningful as exemplified by the substitution of "Happy Holidays" for "Merry Christmas."

Memorial Day should be a solemn day on which Americans take time to honor those Americans who fought and died for America and for liberty. But, again, fewer and fewer Americans visit military cemeteries, just as fewer communities have Memorial Day festivities.

We come, finally, to the mother of American holidays, July Fourth, the day America was born. This day has a long history of vibrant and meaningful celebrations. But it, too, is rapidly losing its meaning. For example, look around—especially if you live in a large urban area—and see how few homes display the American flag. For most Americans, it appears that the Fourth has become merely a day to take off from work and enjoy hot dogs with friends.

Our national holidays were established to commemorate the most significant national events and individuals in our history; they now exist primarily to provide us with a day off. This was reinforced by the nation's decision to shift some of the holidays to a Monday—thereby losing the meaning of the specific date in order to give us a three-day weekend.

National memory dies without national ritual. And without a national memory, a nation dies. That is the secret at the heart of the Jewish people's survival that the American people must learn if they are to survive.

When Jews gather at the Passover Seder—and this is the most widely observed Jewish holiday—they recount the exodus from Egypt, an event that occurred 3,200 years ago. We Americans have difficulty keeping alive the memory of events that happened less than 250 years ago.

How have the Jews accomplished this? By the ritual of the Passover Seder. Jews spend the evening recounting the exodus from Egypt—and as if it happened to them. In the words of the Passover Haggadah—the Passover Seder book—"every person is obligated to regard himself as if he himself left Egypt." The story is retold in detail, and it is told as if it happened to those present at the Seder, not only to those who lived it 3,200 years ago.

That has to be the motto of the July Fourth Seder. We all have to retell the story in as much detail as possible and to regard ourselves as if we, no matter when we or our ancestors came to America—were present at the nation's founding in 1776.

The Seder achieves the feat not only through detailed recitation of the story, but through engaging the interest of the youngest of those at the table (indeed, they are its primary focus), through special food, through song, and through relevant prayer. Obviously, just as secular Jews tend to avoid the prayer part of the Haggadah, so, too, secular Americans are free to avoid the prayer part of an American Seder Book.

This is why PragerU created the July Fourth Seder—an Independence Day ceremony. We now have a generation of Americans who possess little American identity, precisely because they have been given little American memory. The nation whose Founders saw it as a Second Israel must now look to the First Israel for guidance on how a people sustains itself across generations.

With the help of our friends at the White House and the Department of Education, we have made this ceremony available for all Americans to observe. It is my deep hope that during America's 250th birthday, millions of Americans will take part in this profound ritual of remembrance and appreciation.

PRAGERU AMERICA AT 250

White House Ceremony and Founders Museum

In the summer of 2025, PragerU proudly partnered in the launch of the new Founders Museum and the Road to Liberty exhibit at the White House. This historic initiative educates Americans about the courage, vision, and enduring legacy of our nation's Founders.

PragerU was honored to participate in the museum's opening celebration—an event co-hosted by Second Lady Usha Vance, United States Secretary of Education Linda McMahon, and PragerU. The Road to Liberty exhibit, launched alongside the new Founders Museum, features portraits of all fifty-six signers of the Declaration of Independence, six influential women of the Revolution, and featurettes covering nineteen pivotal events that shaped America's founding. To bring these stories to life, PragerU produced eighty-one original videos using cutting-edge AI animation and storytelling technology.

During the opening event, PragerU led an Independence Day Ceremony of our own design. Inspired by the structure of the Passover Seder, this interactive experience honors the bravery, sacrifice, and timeless values that built our nation. The ceremony offers a guided way to reflect on the meaning of American liberty—through storytelling, readings, and symbolic acts of remembrance.

To help families and communities across the country host their own ceremonies, PragerU created a family-friendly book featuring a ready-to-use script, detailed accounts of key Revolutionary War events and turning points, profiles of the Founding Fathers, and fun, educational activities for all ages.

PragerU's Road to Liberty videos are featured on the official White House website and PragerU.com, extending the exhibit's reach far beyond Washington. In addition, a free, downloadable version of the exhibit allows families, schools, and organizations nationwide to bring this powerful tribute to freedom into their own homes and communities.

More White House Commissions in the Works!

Recognized as a "doer" by the Administration, with the ability to quickly and efficiently create projects of high educational value, PragerU has been commissioned by the White House to deliver multiple projects—without government funding. We're thrilled to share a sneak peek into one of our biggest commissions from the White House yet—the America at 250 Mobile Museum!

AMERICA 250 MOBILE MUSEUM

PragerU is taking this historic mission on the road with the America at 250 Mobile Museum. In partnership with the White House, a fleet of custom-designed semi-trucks will crisscross the nation, engaging millions of Americans at major national events in the lead-up to our country's 250th anniversary.

The Mobile Museum interiors—conceptualized and designed by PragerU—will feature stunning multimedia exhibits, exclusive PragerU video content, and the debut of our forthcoming America at 250 Magazine (now in development).

Visitors will enjoy an immersive learning experience, enhanced by interactive QR codes that link to additional digital resources—ensuring the educational journey continues well beyond the museum walls. Through this innovative mobile initiative, PragerU will reach millions of Americans—inspiring families, students, and citizens nationwide to rediscover the principles that make America unique.

And this is just the beginning. Stay tuned for upcoming projects—including National Celebrations at The Fair, Artwork in U.S. Embassies, and other White House commissions currently in Research and Development. Together, these exciting new ventures will open doors to entirely new audiences—expanding PragerU's reach well beyond the digital space.

TAKE A SNEAK PEEK AT THE MOBILE MUSEUM

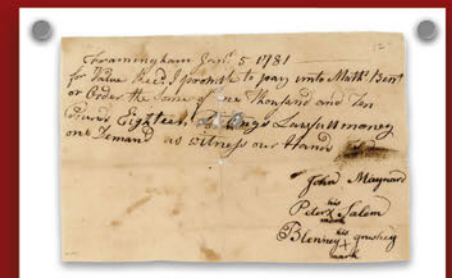

PragerU is bringing 1776 to 2026. In typical PragerU fashion, we're meeting Americans of all ages where they are—with an engaging, family-friendly Mobile Museum. Many Americans can't afford to travel or take time off to visit a major museum, so we're reaching the American public in the most innovative way possible. Through digital products and AI technology, we're bringing our proud history to life.

THE GREAT AMERICAN VIRTUAL ARTIFACT VAULT

In partnership with Glenn Beck's American Journey Experience, historical artifacts from Glenn's remarkable vault will be featured in the exhibit. Artifacts range from George Washington's spectacles to original drafts of the Declaration of Independence to weaponry used during the Revolutionary War. Each display panel links to a virtual archive via a QR code. Guests can visit the Virtual Vault to learn even more about each item through videos and 3D rotatable experiences.

OBJECT OF HISTORY

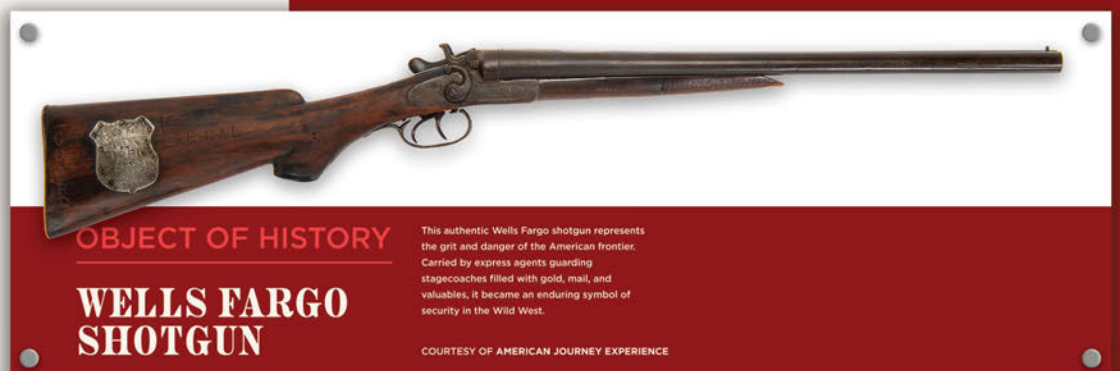

PETER SALEM LETTER

This document bears the mark of Peter Salem, a formerly enslaved African American patriot who fought with extraordinary courage during the American Revolution. Because Salem was not formally educated and could not write his name, he signed this document with his mark—a common practice among those who with no formal education.

Peter Salem's story stands as a powerful testament to the American struggle for freedom. Enlisting in the Massachusetts militia after gaining his freedom, Salem fought at the Battle of Bunker Hill on June 17, 1775, where he is credited with firing the shot that mortally wounded British Major John Pitcairn. His bravery gave the Americans a critical tempo which allowed them to retreat with fewer casualties.

This simple mark—written by a man once enslaved—symbolizes the enduring fight for liberty and equality that shaped the very foundation of the United States of America.

MESSAGE FROM ALLEN ESTRIN

Co-Founder of PragerU

Dear Friends,

America's 250th birthday is a golden opportunity to instill our young people with a renewed spirit of patriotism—and PragerU is taking full advantage of it.

Imagine millions of students learning that they have every reason to be proud of their country.

Well, you don't have to imagine it—it's happening.

In the past year, PragerU has:

1. Completed a monumental undertaking, our "American Presidents" series, biographies of each of the forty-five men who have occupied the White House. The best way to learn history is through biography—and the best way to learn American history is through the lives of our presidents. Every major event in our national story has, in one way or another, passed through the office of the chief executive.
2. Published our first book with HarperCollins—The Honest Book of Presidents—a compilation of our 5-Minute Video Presidents transcripts. This marks a major validation of PragerU's quality and reach—and HarperCollins's belief in its broad appeal. Let's make it a bestseller!

3. Released "Ten Most Important Supreme Court Cases," a 10-part 5-Minute Video series. From Marbury v. Madison to Roe v. Wade, these are the decisions that shaped not only America's laws but its culture.

4. Planned our first college-credit course. Southeastern University in Florida is so impressed by our Presidents series and the new book that they are building a for-credit college course around it—one that will also be available to thirteen other colleges in their network nationwide.

As our nation celebrates its 250th birthday, PragerU will be there—leading, educating, and inspiring the next generation to love and defend America.

Join us in this mission. Together, we can ensure that the next generation grows up proud of America's values, confident in her goodness, and ready to carry forward the torch of liberty.

Sincerely,

Allen Estrin

Co-Founder and Executive Director

THE RUMORS ARE TRUE... WE ARE PUTTING THE “UNIVERSITY” INTO PRAGERU!

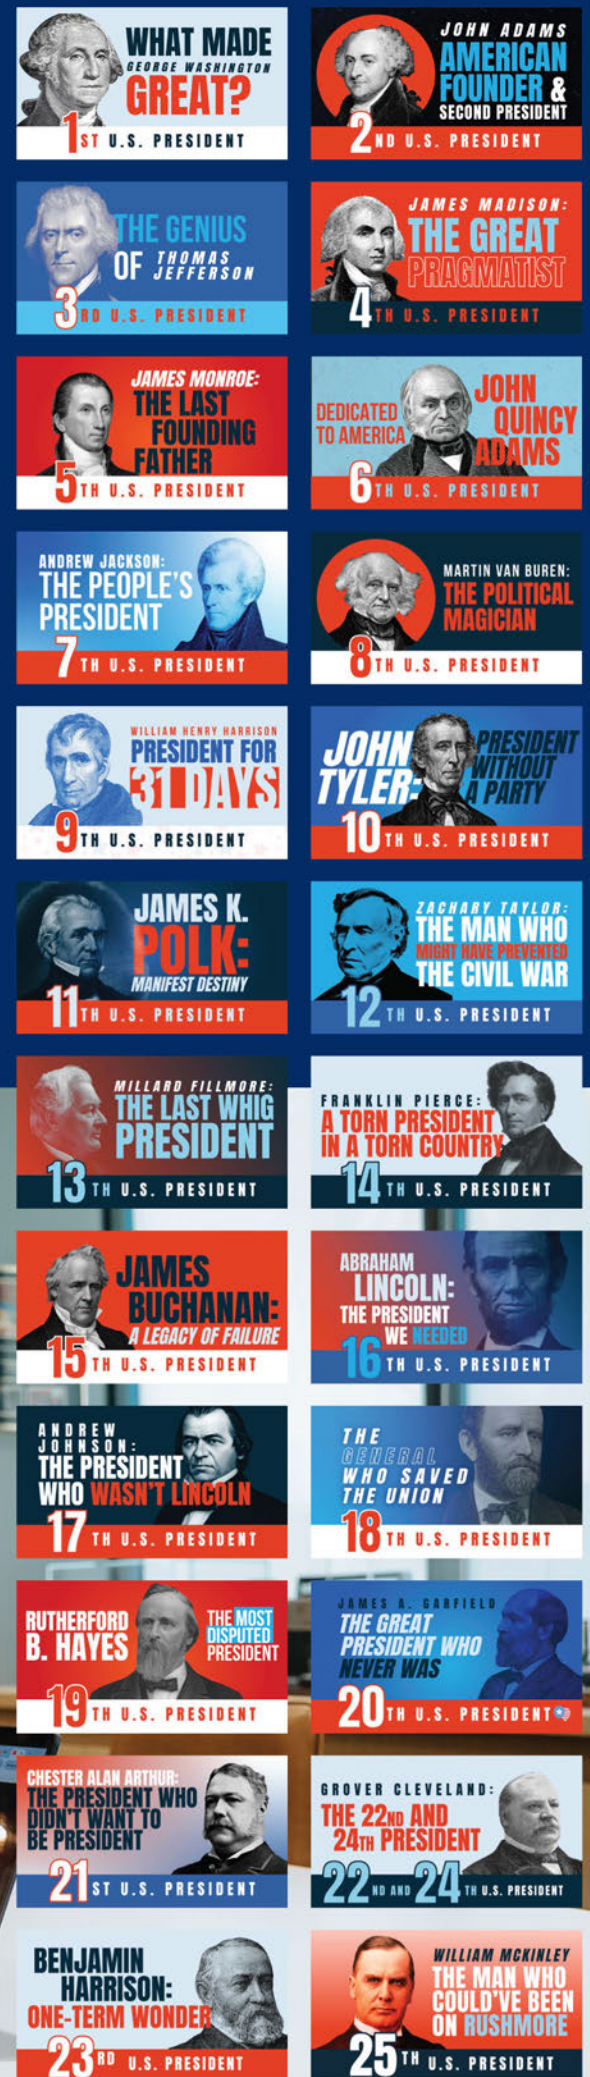

“Not a Real University!?”

Now you can actually earn real college credit with PragerU—through an accredited institution.

Our new course, “American History through Presidential Biographies,” is what you hope to find at universities. Using our celebrated 5-Minute Videos as the foundation, this course brings together the wisdom of leading historians and commentators—Allen Guelzo, Wilfred McClay, Carol Swain, Michael Knowles, and others—to give you an honest and inspiring account of America’s story.

In Part 1 of this two-part course, you’ll see how the office of the presidency developed alongside the major events of our nation’s past—from the miracle of America’s Founding to the extraordinary growth of the Gilded Age. Part 2, which covers the Progressive Era through the present day, will be available in Summer 2026.

PragerU has always believed in giving people a serious, truthful, and values-based education. Now, that education carries official college credit.

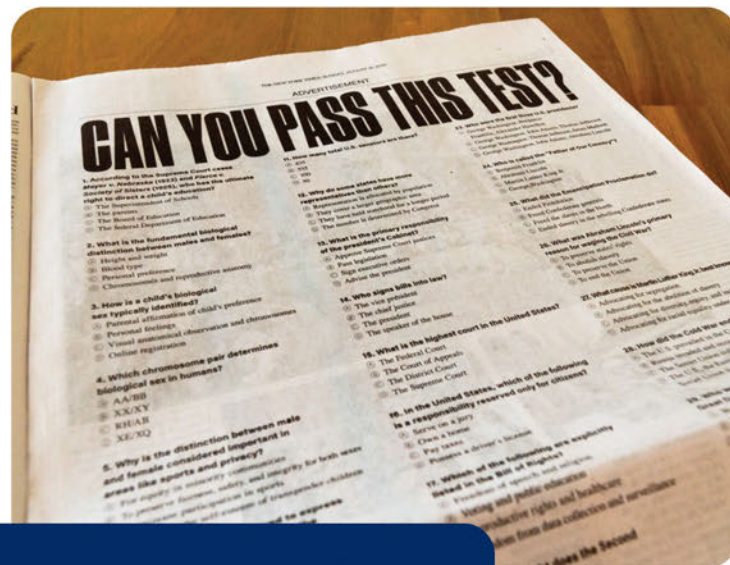

THERE'S NO BAD PRESS!

PragerU at the Center of the National Conversation

PragerU is once again at the center of a media firestorm. Two flashpoints dominated the headlines: claims that PragerU is becoming "the next PBS" and the launch of our groundbreaking Teacher Qualification Test.

The White House commissioning PragerU to deliver several major projects helped fuel the narrative, sparking waves of hand-wringing from the left about our growing influence. Meanwhile, our Teacher Qualification Test—designed to evaluate educators on knowledge of civics and understanding of key Supreme Court decisions affecting classrooms—captured nationwide attention. To amplify its reach, PragerU placed a front-page ad in The New York Times, prompting tens of thousands of Americans to take the test.

Take the Teacher Qualification Test for yourself!

Below is just a sampling of the massive time and resources major left-wing outlets devote to covering PragerU, recognizing our growing influence:

"Why critics are alarmed about the influence of PragerU's educational videos."

"Oklahoma's partnership with PragerU is a clear sign of the influence the company has gained in the US education system."

—CNN

"How the right-wing network PragerU could fill the void left by the Corporation for Public Broadcasting's defunding."

—Vox

"That gives you a sense of how well-positioned PragerU is in the conservative movement's propaganda and indoctrination plans...Move over PBS, and make way for PragerU."

—MSNBC

"'They have a 50-state strategy': PragerU's 'insidious' alternative to PBS hits U.S. classrooms."

—MSNBC

MARKETING IMPACT

For decades, the right ignored the culture war, focusing solely on politics. The left didn't make this mistake. Instead, they leveraged actors, athletes, and musicians to promote their ideology—silencing influential conservative voices through intimidation and the threat of blacklisting. These woke influencers spread harmful ideas to millions of young people who see them as role models.

PragerU is fighting back by creating our own role models—incubating new, young voices who share our values for a change! PragerU Personalities serve as key entry points into our content funnel, delivering the right message to the right audience at the right time. We are continually developing personalities to connect with specific demographics and expand our reach and impact.

Xavier DuRousseau

Xavier used to march with BLM. While attempting to debunk PragerU videos, he accidentally “red-pilled” himself. He’s now the host of the PragerU show, Respectfully, Xavier, and uses his growing platforms to educate Gen Z viewers about conservatism, politics, and harmful ideologies infecting culture. This year, he was featured on the cover of The New York Times.

Franklin Camargo

Franklin was born in Venezuela, where his family struggled to survive and prosper under socialism. After a family trip to the USA as a young boy, Franklin made it his goal to live in a capitalist society. Now a proud resident of the United States, he dedicates his life to speaking out against the policies that destroyed his home country. Franklin also spearheads our PragerU Español initiative.

Shabbos Kestenbaum

Shabbos was the lead plaintiff against Harvard (his alma mater), alleging pervasive and systemic antisemitism. He’s also testified to the U.S. Congress. Since joining PragerU, Shabbos has had a massive national media impact, including The New York Times and Piers Morgan Uncensored. Now the host of PragerU’s The Brief, Shabbos is also working on a new show called TheoLOGICal, taking inspiration from Dennis’s groundbreaking show Religion on the Line.

Jill Simonian

Director of Outreach and co-creator of PragerU Kids, Jill is a twenty-year media veteran known as the beloved on-camera host for a variety of kids’ content, including Otto’s Tales and Craftory, and served as the co-producer for Guess or Mess and Unboxed, USA. She also hosts Parent Alert—a livestream that delivers breaking news to families on education and parenting.

Aaron Prager

As the son of Dennis Prager, Aaron was raised in a loving and values-driven home. But by his teens, Aaron was battling a serious addiction to drugs and alcohol. Through rehab, faith, and the support of family, Aaron rebuilt his life and shares his story to show others that hope is never out of reach. Aaron’s new show, American Recovery, is in development.

Selina Lewis

Selina was raised in an apolitical home and thought she disagreed with conservative ideas, but had simply never been exposed to them before. After being shown a PragerU video—and discovering black conservatives like Thomas Sowell, Ben Carson, and Larry Elder—Selina’s mind was forever changed. That eye-opening moment shifted her perspective and sparked a journey of intellectual discovery. She now hosts a variety of content and works in our kids department.

TESTIMONIALS

On Patriotism & Joy

"I was raised in a VERY left-wing household and often viewed my skin color as a glass ceiling. It wasn't until trying to debunk PragerU videos that I finally recognized how blessed I am to be an American. The values I've acquired since becoming a fan of PragerU have drastically improved my entire outlook on life as well as my self-image. The truth is liberating, and PragerU makes finding the truth accessible to everyone."

XAVIAER DUROUSSEAU

"America saved my life when I fled socialist Venezuela, giving me the most precious gift—freedom...I've learned that America's greatness lies in its ideas—what Dennis Prager calls the American Trinity: In God We Trust, E Pluribus Unum, and Liberty... PragerU stands as the best defense of these values, helping ensure that the greatest nation on earth remains strong, prosperous, and free."

FRANKLIN CAMARGO

"What brings me joy is knowing that PragerU Kids actively teaches children how to be grateful—for life itself and our nation. Unapologetic gratitude inevitably leads to joy, and America can't function without a deep and joyful appreciation for how our country started and how far we've come through our differences. Without ingrained gratitude, a joyful America is not possible. Not on our watch."

JILL SIMONIAN

"...the social contracts that have allowed us to flourish within the constitutional bounds are being bent in some cases and completely broken in others...That's where PragerU comes in. With the expressed goal of educating people who otherwise would be prime targets of the mass anti-American informational campaigns, we are pushing back stronger than ever...This brings me great joy. Not just for PragerU as a group and force for good, but for the future of America."

AARON PRAGER

"The United States of America is the only country that, from its inception, encouraged and celebrated religious freedom. I view myself as much American as I do Jewish. Rather than apologizing or acquiescing, PragerU celebrates the foundations of our country and continues in the tradition of advancing and securing Judeo-Christian values."

SHABBOS KESTENBAUM

"Working in PragerU Kids truly brings me joy because it reminds me daily why I love this country. It shares knowledge that's often overlooked and helps restore the values of freedom, faith, and family that mean so much to me. There's something special about seeing young Americans reconnect with what makes our nation beautiful. PragerU inspires me to love God, cherish family, and celebrate the blessings of living in America."
