The screenshot shows the Osmosis website interface for a video titled "Rheumatic heart disease: Nursing Process (ADPIE)". The video player is the central focus, displaying a diagram of the pathophysiology of rheumatic fever. The diagram shows Streptococcus pyogenes (bacteria) entering the body, activating the immune system, which produces proteins. These proteins then activate immune cells, leading to an inflammatory response and tissue destruction, specifically mentioning fever. The diagram also shows a human silhouette with various organs (heart, lungs, brain) and a heart cross-section. The video player has a progress bar at 1:43 / 12:33 and a transcript below it. The transcript lists content reviewers and contributors, and includes a snippet of text about a 17-year-old female client. To the right of the video player is a sidebar with a "Videos" tab selected, showing a list of related videos such as "Coronary artery disease (CAD) and angina pectoris: Nursing Process (ADPIE)", "Hypertension: Nursing Process (ADPIE)", "Left-sided heart failure: Nursing Process (ADPIE)", and "Myocardial infarction (STEMI)". Below the video list is an "Assessments" section for "Rheumatic heart disease: Nursing Process (ADPIE)" with a "Review Questions" button and a "Start" button. The interface also includes a search bar at the top, a navigation menu, and a "Add to playlist" button. Several blue callout boxes with white text point to specific features: "Students learn visually and control what comes next" points to the video player; "Practice questions linked to learning objectives" points to the "Assessments" section; "Video chapters allow for bite-sized learning" points to the video player's progress bar; "Content accessible to all via closed captioning" points to the "CC" icon in the video player; "Quickly scan video transcripts to sync with learning objectives" points to the transcript; and "Watch videos at the speed that works best for you" points to the video player's speed control icon.
